FOREIGNERS VILIFIED AT CELEBRATION IN CHENGTU

Scurrilous Pamphlets Distributed By Yang Sen

PROTEST LODGED

No Reply Is Received From Military Governor

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Chengtu, October 24.—On the occasion of the 'Double Tenth' celebrations General Yang Sen, the Military Governor of Szechuan, invited the whole foreign community to be present at a review of his troops and a luncheon. Large numbers of foreigners attended and offered their congratulations. Meanwhile, unknown to them, General Yang is alleged to have distributed copies of an address to the crowds of Chinese in which he vilified the foreigners, their treaties with and attitude towards China, and stated that Chinese were continually being ill-treated and killed by foreigners not only in other countries but in China itself, and that since China was a weak nation there was no redress.

Mr. G. A. Combe, the Senior (British) Consul, wrote a protest to General Yang. He said that he had been expecting to see a denial of the statements made in this address which had appeared in the local Chinese newspapers, but no comment had been made. He had reported the matter to the Dean of the Diplomatic Body in Peking and awaited Governor Yang Sen's reply.

No reply has been received by Mr. Comte to date, but the proposed reply has appeared in the local Chinese press to the effect that what the Governor had said was true and no one had the right to prohibit him from speaking about these matters.

Massachusetts Leader Dies Following Sudden Attack

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, Nov. 8.—Senator Lodge is weaker today. He is only conscious intermittently.

(Reuter's American Service)

Boston, Nov. 10.—Senator Lodge is unconscious and very weak. There is little hope of recovery.

Later.—Senator Lodge is dead.

As leader of the United States Senate "die-hard" group in their relentless opposition to the Treaty of Versailles and the League Covenant, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge wielded, perhaps, a greater influence in the foreign affairs of the United States, than any other single figure in the post-war period. An irreconcilable from the outset, Senator Lodge as Republican floor leader, organised what the late President Woodrow Wilson characterised "that small band of wilful men," and, by holding his bloc together, succeeded effectually in eliminating any possibility of American entrance into the League.

Senator Lodge was born at Boston on May 12, 1850 and was a direct descendant of the Cabots, a family famous in Massachusetts' history from Colonial days. Following his graduation at Harvard, with the degree of bachelor of laws, he spent a period of three years as editor of the North American

CONSERVATIVE PRESS RAPS APPOINTMENT OF CHURCHILL

Bitter Criticism Is Voiced Over Selection

ADMIRALTY, TOO

Choice Of Bridgeman Is Held To Be Inapropos

(BY UNITED PRESS)

London, Nov. 9.—A considerable section of the Conservative press is voicing bitter opposition to Mr. Baldwin's selection of Mr. Winston Churchill for the position of chancellor of the exchequer in the new Conservative cabinet.

The majority of Mr. Churchill's opponents take the position that the chancellorship should have gone to Sir Robert Horne, who they assert, is a big business man and is therefore much better qualified to assume so important a post.

Similar opposition is expressed regarding the appointment of Mr. Bridgeman as First Lord of the Admiralty, where, the press holds, the most important and delicate questions, particularly the matter of resumption of work on the Singapore Base, will have to be decided shortly.

The failure of Marquess Curzon to obtain a position in the new cabinet more important than that of Lord President of the Council and Leader of the House of Lords is reported to have been due partly to the desire of Marquess Curzon to retire and devote himself to writing and partly to the belief of leaders of the Conservative party that his appointment to any place of power would be construed as antagonistic to France, Turkey and other nations.

OPPOSITION AS POLES RECEIVE SOVIET'S ENVOY

Press Blames New Minister In Connection With Former Dealings

(Reuter's Service)

Warsaw, Nov. 9.—M. Woikoff, the new Soviet Minister to Poland, handing his credentials to the President, assured the Polish Government of the Soviet's friendly intentions and desire of cooperation.

President Wojciechowski, replying, expressed the hope that fulfilment of the obligations of both countries would be the foundation of the resumption of normal relations.

The press is hostile to M. Woikoff, alleging that during the two years that he was chief Soviet representative on the commission for the execution of the clauses of the Riga Treaty he placed many obstacles in the way of the Polish representatives. The papers also point out that attacks by bandits from across the eastern border are a daily occurrence.

Rug-Collecting Hobby Causes American To Travel 400,000 Miles

Mr. J. F. Ballard In Shanghai En Route To India On Search For Two Sixteenth Century Masterpieces

The ordinary man about town frequently shows his collection of pipes, perhaps 20 to 25 battle-scarred veterans, to admiring friends and figures he has done well in his collecting hobby.

Mr. James F. Ballard, St. Louis, Missouri, is just completing 400,000 miles of travel and the expenditure of two ordinary good sized fortunes in following his hobby—the collection of rugs of all nations. He has been globe-trotting for 19 years.

Mr. Ballard, passing through Shanghai on the President McKinley, Admiral Oriental liner, is enroute to India on his second round the world trip this year. He will visit Canton two weeks, in search of valuable rugs that may have been left after the soldiers got through with the city.

Then he will get on to India, to purchase two sixteenth century rugs. Then back to New York and to St. Louis to add to his world-famous collection.

MUSEUM EXHIBIT

Part of that collection, 129 rugs, is now installed in the Metropolitan Musseum of Art in New York City, this number being required with what the Museum already possessed to make their collection the most notable and comprehensive one contained in any museum in the world. The rugs, valued at $500,000 gold, were given to the museum from Mr. Ballard's private collection in May, 1922. These were selected by the museum from 500 rugs which he offered the museum for completion of their collection.

At his home in St. Louis, Mr. Ballard has a large fireproof gallery constructed for the showing of his collection. The gallery also contains other valuable bits of art.

America and Europe are becoming more familiar with rugs and greater appreciation is had of them in all metropolitan centers, Mr. Ballard said yesterday. The Chinese rug, perhaps, is found in the United States in greater quantities than Near East productions because of greater numbers of U.S. army and navy people buying rugs on trips to China from the Philippines.

ORIENTAL INFLUENCE

Many European and American rugs show an oriental influence. The application of oriental design to occidental carpets is sometimes amusing, Mr. Ballard finds.

Mr. Ballard's collection has been made under obvious classifications: First comes Persia be-

GERMANY PLANS TO CUT TAX ON SMALL INCOMES

Reductions Expected To Add To Export Capacity Of Nation

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, November 9.—The German Government has decided to reduce the income tax by fifteen to twenty-five percent on incomes of under 8,000 marks per annum with further allowances for children. The business turn-over tax and the luxury tax will also be substantially reduced.

These reliefs are possible in consequence of the improved financial situation due to Germany's obtaining loans under the Dawes Scheme and to the large excess of revenue over expenditure in the national budget

It is expected that the reductions mentioned, besides decreasing the lost of living, will increase German's export capacity as it will not be necessary to raise the worker's wages and export prices consequently can be kept at a level which will enable exporters to compete successfully in the world's markets.

Sixth Anniversary Of Halt Of World War To Be Observed

United Service Association To Hold Several Gatherings During Day

Six years ago today the armistice, halting all warfare between Germany and the Allies, was signed.

In Shanghai, Dean Walker of the Cathedral rang the chimes shortly after the news was received here. A Te Deum was sung. An Italian man-o-war fired a 21 gun salute.

Today the usual ceremonies, similar to the ones observed in the last two years, will be held in Shanghai.

The United Service Associations will be in charge of the observance. Wreaths will be laid on the war memorial at 8.45 o'clock this morning with G. de Rossi, of Italy, senior consul in Shanghai, making a short address.

The annual services will be at the Cathedral at 10:45 o'clock. Tonight at 7:30 o'clock members of the association will hold a dinner at the French Club. A dance will be held at the club, starting shortly after 10 o'clock, with friends of members coming in at that time.

The Boy Scouts will parade on the grounds of the British consulate general at 8 o'clock this morning. Acting Consul General Pratt and Sir Skinner Turner will make short talks to the scouts.

SPAIN RESUMES FRONTIER GUARD TO HALT REVOLT

Sixteen alleged Plotters Are Arrested But Later Released

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 8.—That there has been trouble in Spain appears in telegrams from Perpignan announcing the arrest of 20 armed Spaniards who confessed that they were engaged in a plot against the Directory and in a telegram from Barcelona describing pursuit by the police of suspects and a prolonged fight with revolvers in Boulevard San Antonio which resulted in the killing of one policeman and the wounding of another and the arrest of seven suspects all carrying bombs and revolvers.

The Spanish Embassy in London states that an armed band of 30 entered the province of Navarra from France yesterday morning but was forced to recross the frontier leaving one dead and one wounded and five prisoners. An attempt to seize the barracks at Barcelona was also defeated and the assailants arrested.

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 8.—Further reports received from the Spanish border record great excitement continues in consequence of reports that efforts are being made to smuggle arms at many points on the frontier. Numerous arrests have been made at the various posts.

(Reuter's Service)

Madrid, November 8.—A communique issued today gives details of the collision between the police and invaders at Pampelona, near the French frontier, in which 2 police and 5 invaders were killed. Twenty-seven of the latter have been arrested. The communique states that the affair is apparently part of a revolutionary movement initiated by Anarchists across the French frontier, in conjunction with Spanish syndicalist extremists.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Nov. 8.—Newspapers report recent activity by Spaniards between Paris and the Spanish frontier. Several parties left in motor cars for the frontier, which they crossed afoot.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Nov. 10.—A self-styled Spanish agitator writing in the Matin says that Spanish emigres on the frontier, awaiting the outbreak of the revolutionary movement, were tricked into prematurely crossing the frontier by a decoy message purporting to emanate from confederates, but

"Siamese" Twins Getting Together On Love Problem

Lucio and Simplico Godino, one of the several "Siamese" twins in existence in the world, are getting together on ideas more and more every day.

The twins, joined together at birth, were visitors in Shanghai yesterday, enroute to their home in Manila under the guardianship of Mr. Teodoro R. Yangco, wealthy Manila merchant and philanthropist. They are traveling on the President McKinley, AdmiAdmiral Oriental liner.

Just before they left Manila a year ago the two lads now 16 years old, were divided on one qustion—that of love. One of the boys was fairly enamored with a certain fair-haired Filipina senorita of Manila. The other cared naught for the ladies. Couldn't see 'em, although he did yield at times to calling on his brother's girl.

It's all changed now, however, they indicated yesterday. Both lads are exhibiting pictures of "sweeties" who will meet them at Manila when the McKinley docks.

The police of Manila were presented with a perplexing problem several years ago by the Godino twins. It's against the law to fire firecrackers in Manila in the nipa districts where houses are highly inflammable. One of the twins violated the law one Fourth of July, setting off a bunch of crackers.

A vigilant policeman, happening along, arrested the violator of the law. But the boys gained their freedom at the station, the sergeant in charge figuring it was much easier to let them go than to have to argue with the non-violator of the law that he would have the law on the sergeant if he were jailed without just cause.

The "Siamese" twins were born on one of the southern islands of the Philippines. They were exhibited in various sideshows as the orginal Siamese twins for several years. Then Mr. Yangco adopted the boys, taking them away from the shows and giving them educational advantages.

They are now completing a round the world trip of a year. They accompanied Mr. Yangco to the world Sunday school convention in Scotland and went on to New York where they have been studying for several months. They both play saxaphones and, through acquaintance with the American sideshow, can handle the English "slanguage" to a high degree of perfection.

The two boys could be parted—but in New York they decided, even after surgeons had told them a separation could be made, that they would stick around together.

WU TO COME HERE; STILL DETERMINED TO CARRY ON FIGHT

SUN ASSERTS IN INTERVIEW HE WILL HOLD ARSENAL HERE

Has 2,000 Troops On Premises; To Get All Output

USES OWN MEN

Fills All Important Jobs With His Nominees

BY D. J. LEWIS

That the Shanghai Arsenal is to be controlled by Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, Inspector-General of Chekiang and Fukien provinces, was indicated most emphatically by General Sun himself in an interview with the writer who made a trip to Hangchow last week-end for the purpose of obtaining his views not only on the political-military situation as it affects Shanghai, but upon the China situation generally.

Since the Shanghai Arsenal was the principal bone of contention in the recent fighting between Kiangsu and Chekiang that cost so much in human blood and treasure, the foregoing undoubtedly was the most important result of the interview. The words of Marshal Sun's exact words.

"I now have two thousand troops inside of the Shanghai Arsenal and I have sent many telegrams to Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan of Kiangsu informing him that these troops of mine in the arsenal are under his command." But in the same breath Marshal Sun reiterated, that these troops are to remain in the arsenal permanently. "Marshal Chi," continued General Sun, "has an arsenal at Nanking and therefore does not need the products of the Shanghai Arsenal.

It is also of interest to know, that the arsenal is now working full time turning out guns, pistols and small ammunition, all of which is being shipped to Hangchow for the use of Marshal Sun Chuan-fang's forces. When asked regarding the possible removal of the arsenal from Shanghai, Marshal Sun promised to send to The China Press for publication shortly a statement regarding his plan for making Shanghai a greater port for handling the world's commerce. General Sun apparently has some definite ideas regarding the future of Shanghai and the development of commerce here, and said that the post of defense commissioner should be abolished. Marshal Sun said nothing in the course of the interview to indicate that he had prior knowledge of the appointment, announced on Sunday of General Chang Yung-ming, the Hupeh commander at Lunghua, as Defense Commissioner at Shanghai. General Sun believes that the Police Commissioner at Shanghai should be appointed by the Central Government and that all troops should be removed from the Shanghai area.

NO MORE WAR

There is to be no more war in the Shanghai district, if Marshal Sun's ideas prevail, according to his conversation with me on Sunday.

In the larger field of national politics, Marshal Sun said that he was friendly with both Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, the Anfu leader and with Marshal Wu Pei-fu, the former leader of the Chihli forces. "Marshal Wu was my leader, you know," stated General Sun with a smile. When questioned regarding his opinion of the actions of General Feng Yu-hsiang in seizing control of Peking, the Hangchow leader said that he personally disapproved of the Christian General's actions relative to the removal of President Tsao Kun. He does however approve of General Feng's ideas on peace through conference of the various political interests. Marshal Sun

FLAMES DESTROY MUNITIONS CARS; TIENTSIN SCARED

Rumors Of Fighting Cause Rush Into Foreign Concessions

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Nov. 8.—At 7 this morning, a fire broke out in a train at the Central Station laden with war-stores belonging to the Fengtien troops, reducing four munition coaches to ashes. Owing to the terrific sound caused by explosions of munitions, there was a stampede of people into the foreign settlements as they thought at first that fighting had occurred.

CHANG AND FENG REACH TIENTSIN FOR CONFERENCE

Mukden Warlord Accompanied By Bodyguard Of Several Thousand Troops

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tientsin, Nov. 10.—General Feng Yu-hsiang arrived here at 9 o'clock this morning in order to hold a conference with Marshals Tuan Chi-jui and Chang Tso-lin and General Chang Huichiang. Marshal Chang [illegible] and arrived this afternoon. They were accompanied by a body-guard of several thousand heavily armed troops in seven trains and passed through Tientsin East Station, alighting at the Central Station. Extraordinary precautions were taken at both stations and along the route to Hopei in the native city, where it is understood they have established headquarters.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tientsin, Nov. 10.—Marshal Chang Tso-lin arrived at Kuyeh at 8 o'clock yesterday evening and is expected here early this morning. The station is elaborately decorated.

General Feng Yu-hsiang, who is reported also to be coming to Tientsin, to confer with Marshal Chang and Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, had not passed Yangtsun at midnight.

Large Fengtien troop movements through Tientsin continued during the week-end. On Saturday and Sunday 10,000 Fengtienders passed through the city, some going to the Tientsin-Pukow line and others to Lofa.

General Feng's and General Hu Ching-yi's troops, who had taken up their quarters in Tientsin city, have departed for Peking.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 2.—General Chang Pi, newly appointed Superintendent of the Metropolitan Police, urges the local gentry to form an organisation to assist the police in maintaining order at the capital.

An accident occurred this morning in the barracks near the Tungan Bazaar, Morrison Street, which resulted in the injury of four men. These barracks have been taken over by the 11th Division, some details of which are there now. They were formerly occupied by General Munthe's Legation Guards, and at one time housed Manchu troops who left some shells there. It seems that a coolie was using one of these old shells to break up coal when the shell exploded. The four men have been sent to hospital.

The French officer in charge of the international train that reached Peking last evening submitted a report to his commandant in Tientsin regarding the firing on the train, and it is expected that a strong protest will be made to General Feng Yu-hsiang. Other trains had been fired upon, and the troops at Yangtsun were able to warn the passengers. There seems to be little doubt that the troops responsible for his hostility

WILL FORM EXPEDITION AGAINST FENG, HE DECLARES

Chihli Leader Gives Out Interview At Chefoo

SILENT ON CHANG

Claims Allegiance Of 40,000 Troops At Hankow

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Chefoo, Nov. 10.—Reuter's correspondent today interviewed Marshal Wu Pei-fu on board the transport Hwajah.

The Marshal was in excellent health and was apparently in good spirits. He affirmed confidence in his ultimate victory. Forty-thousand of his troops at Hankow, he said, and more at Nanking awaited his instructions. He was now, accompanied by transports and three warships, en route to a southern destination, possibly Shanghai, to reassemble his forces. He would, he declared, return to Peking at the head of a punitive expedition against General Feng Yu-hsiang. The Marshal would not speak of his attitude vis-a-vis Marshal Chang Tso-lin.

Mr. Li Sum-ling, Marshal Wu's diplomatic adviser, said that the heavy storm on Saturday and Sunday had delayed the Marshal's departure for the south. Accompanied by four transports and three cruisers, he would leave on Monday afternoon, heading for the south. During the Marshal's stay here, Mr. Li said, his fleet had been supplied with coal, provisions and fresh water by the local Chamber of Commerce.

"General Chi Hsieh-yuan, General Hsiao Yao-nan and General Sun Chuan-fang have telegraphed assuring Marshal Wu of their full support," Mr. Li declared in conclusion.

OBTAINS SUPPLIES

(Eastern News Agency)

Chefoo, Nov. 9.—Marshal Wu Pei-fu who still is aboard a Chinese warship, which is at anchor off the port of Chefoo, has succeeded in obtaining from Chinese merchants here supplies of foodstuffs and money to the amount of $40,000.

It is stated that Marshal Wu intends to proceed in the direction of Shanghai upon the return of the Haichi which has gone to Tsingtao on a mission to inspect the situation there.

Marshal Wu's troops member approximately 4,000 men.

PEKING'S ORDERS

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Nov. 9.—The General Government has given telegraphic instructions to the Chinese authorities in Chefoo not to provide Marshal Wu's troops with either provisions or military funds on the ground that they are in rebellion against the Central Government, adding that if there is need of providing them with provisions and money from the viewpoint of humanity, the troops under the command of Marshal Wu should first be disarmed.

HONAN TULI DISMISSED

Peking, Nov. 8.—Mandates dated November 7 announce the dismissal of General Chang Fu-lin, Tuli of Honan, the appointment of General Hu Ching-i as Director of Honan Military Affairs, the abolition of the title of Tuli of Honan, the dismissal of General Li Chi-chen, Civil Governor of Honan, to be relieved by General Sun Yo, and the appointment of General Chang Yung-ming, who is now at Lunghwa Shanghai, as Denfence Commissioner of Shanghai and Sungkiang.

HUPEH LEADER NEUTRAL

(Eastern News Agency)

Hankow, Nov. 8.—General Lu Chin-shan, commander of the 18th Division, Brigadier-General Wang Tu-ching, commander of the 21st Mixed Brigade, and Brigadier-General Sung Ta-ssei, commander of the 3rd Mixed Brigade stationed on the borders of Hupeh and Szechuen, have confidently recommended General Wang Ju-chin, commander of the 5th Division, to the post of Commander-in-inChief of Peace Preservation in the western part of Hupeh.

Yesterday, they issued a circular telegram, declaring that they would devote themselves to the maintenance of peace and order in that part and that no troops from other provinces, who carry arms, would be permitted to pass the district between Kuichow and Shansi. To this declaration much importance is being attached, for it is considered that the troops stationed in the western part of Hupeh have manifested their neutrality.

MOVE IN SZECHUEN

(Eastern News Agency)

Ichang, Nov. 9.—The troops under General Lu Ching-shan which are stationed at Wanhsien are preparing to leave Wanhsien and General Lu Ching-shan has wired to the office of the China Merchants Steamship Company at Ichang warning it that as his troops will come down the river on many native boats the steamers should be careful in navigating in the river.

HUPEH PEOPLE PROTEST

(Eastern News Agency)

Hankow, Nov. 9.—As Marshal Wu Pei-fu is coming to the South the attitude of the Yangtsze provinces is attracting much attention.

The Provincial Assembly of Hupeh informed General Hsiao Yao-nan, the Tuchun of Hupeh, on the 7th instant that it is indeed praiseworthy on his part to try to be loyal to Wu Pei-fu due to his past relations but as representatives of the people of the province of Hupeh the Provincial Assembly desires to announce is neutrality with a view to maintaining peace and order in the provinces. If he tries help Wu Pei-fu, the province would become the center of the struggle between the South and the North which the people of the province could not bear. He is asked to take steps to prevent Wu Pei-fu from coming to Hankow so as to prevent him from making Hupeh the base of his military operations.

General Hsiao Yao-nan has not made his attitude clear as there are complicated relations among his officers.

Peking, Nov. 9.—General Feng Yu-hsiang left today for Tientsin where he will meet Marshal Chang Tso-lin and Marshal Tuan Chih-jui. 18 Months For Thefts From Kiddies Wong Chang-hai, 19 years old, probably doesn't know the one about "as easy as taking candy from a baby" but he probably would say it was all wrong if interviewed on the subject.

For Wong has been making a habit of stealing trinkets from children, the police said. He had six charges marked up against him when he appeared before the Mixed Court yesterday. Chains, lockets, earrings, watches—all had been snatched by Wong from the kiddies.

The court gave him 18 months to in which to repent and he will be re-expelled from the settlement when he is released.

Yong Kwei-Chung, 33 years old, had a touch of ill-luck Sunday. Riding a tramcar he inadvertently inserted his hand in the pocket of a Sikh police constable, a fellow passengar, according to the Sikh's testimony in Mixed Court yesterday. The Sikh testified Yong had his hand on his pocketbook when caught. Yong said the pocketbook had fallen to the floor and he was returning it to its proper place. A.W.C. SHOW AT CARLTON PACKED FULL OF LAUGHS

Women's Club Offers Fine Production In "A Full House"

A screamingly funny farce, made funnier by the antics of its principal comedians, who took advantage of all their opportunities for humorous and original interpretations of their respective roles, was produced last night at the Carlton theater by the Dramatic Deparment of the American Women's Club.

"A Full House," by Fred Jackson, originally produced at the Frazee Theater in New York, lived up to its metropolitan press notices and suffered in no wise by its rendition in Shanghai. A first night audience that rocked with laughter from start to finish, was ample evidence, if evidence be needed, that an amateur dramatic club can do wonders with the proper vehicle and the proper people in the different roles.

It might almost be considered unfair to single out any persons for special mention, for the entire cast acquitted itself wonderfully, but the performances of Mrs. Gardner Crane, as Susie, the Scandanavian maid whose one desire was to get out of New York and back to Sioux Ci and Mr. Brattan, as the crook who was a "pink" stand out in the reviewer's mind as being the best because of their consistent funniness on the one hand, and strict adherence to type on the other. These are, undoubtedly, the two funniest characters in the whole three acts, and the make-up of each was perfect.

NOTES AND A NECKLACE

The action revolves around a packet of high temperature letters written in passionately careless moments by Ned Pembrooke to Vera Vernon, siren extraordinary, and a magnificent ruby necklace, owned by Mrs. Pembrooke and stolen from her at the beginning of the play.

Ned, played by Mr. Howard Hastings, who gave excellent account of himself and was responsible for some of the driest lines, is threatened with a breach of promise suit instituted by Vera Vernon, Mrs. Irons just when he finds himself really in love, for the first, or maybe the last time, with Daphne, played by Miss Lorain Fleming. Daphne's sister, Ottily, Mrs. Terry has just married George Howell, a lawyer, (Mr. Gardner Crane,) and it is to George that Ned goes with his case. George, for friendship's sake interrupts his own honeymoon on its second day out, and makes a trip to Boston for the purpose of obtaining the letters from Vera. Naturally, he is pledged to secrecy by the nervous Ned, and so tells his bride that he is called to an imperative business conference in Cleveland.

As is the way with plots, the tangling begins at this point. George succeeds in coaxing the hard-boiled Vera out of the letters, which speaks well for his powers of persuasion and his speed as a worker. He returns to New York on a train that is wrecked and in the confusion picks up the bag of his Pullman neighbor.

A NERVOUS AUNT

A nervous aunt, who somehow or other doesn't believe that George is any better than the rest of men who are, so far as she is concerned, the greatest mistake in the world, has worked Ottily up into a state bordering on hysterics when George finally comes home after his unexplained absence of three days.

A search for George soiled laundry in his travelling bag reveals a burglar's kit and the leather case with the missing necklace. From then on the action is fast and furious, with Susie contributing numerous forced stops on the part of the audience for laughter. Her domestic runningmate, a London butler, plays exceedingly well by Mr. Andrews who never missed his accent once, even when he failed to find a chair he was supposed to sit down on and used the floor instead, gets slightly and very properly in the way of a fast unwinding of the plot and every single member of the cast does his individual best to tangle the skeins still more.

Three policeman who have orders to let anyone in but no one out, are responsible for the full house that literally crams the place at the conclusion of the play.

To reveal the denouement would be to spoil the play for tonight's and tomorrow's audience. There are three acts crammed with speedy action, snappy dialogue, mystery, comedy and what-not—the what-not being the irrepressible Susie.

Mention should also be made of Mrs. Terry for her admirable performance of Ottily; for Mr. Gardner Crane, as the harrassed George who suffered, bled and all but died for his friend; of Mrs. Kingsbury, the aunt with the anti-men complex who does a fine natural faint and is carried upstairs by that gallant gentleman, George, otherwise, Gardner Crane. Mrs. Kingsbury demonstrated last night that she is a really fine actress.

SETTING ATTRACTIVE

The setting the interior of a luxurious New York apartment was attractive; the gowns worn by the feminine members of the cast were exceptionally lovely.

Many prominent members of the American community attended the premiere and the entire performance, starting promptly at 9:15, to the credit of the management, be it said went off without a hitch.

The show is excellent; it is a tonic. All persons in Shanghai interested in laughing should not fail to see it. It will be repeated tonight and tomorrow, at the Carlton, at 9:15. The entire cast is as follows:

Parks	Mr. Andrews
Susie	Mrs. Gardner Crane
Ottily	Mrs. Terry
Miss Winnaker	Mrs. Kingsbury
Daphne	Miss Fleming
Nicholas King	Mr. Bratten
Ned Pembrooke	Mr. Hastings
George Howell	Mr. Gardner Crane
Sergeant Dougherty	Mr. Wentworth
Mooney	Mr. Giovaninni
Kearney	Mr. Carey
Mrs. Fleming	Mrs. Clapp
Vera Vernon	Mrs. Irons
Mrs. Pembrooke	Mrs. Emeus I. C. K.

readily emanating from the Directory's police.

The Matin also asserts that revolutionaries in Barcelona, who were awaiting the signal from their comrades in Madrid, became impatient when it became known that exiles were concentrating on the frontier. They surged into the streets and started fighting which developed into a regular battle on Friday night.

Paris, Nov. 9.—A message from Perpignan to Le Journal states that sixteen Spaniards arrested yesterday have been released as no offence could be proved against them.

Six others have been detained for unlawfully carrying arms. Two of them stated that they intended to participate in a conspiracy against General de Rivera but that they did not belong to any organisation.

Several suspected persons tried to cross the frontier yesterday and two were arrested at Banyuls who were carrying revolvers and anarchist documents.

The Directory has decided to reinforce the frontier guard.

Paris, Nov. 8.—Numerous Spaniards have been arrested in the Eastern Pyrenees for clandestine traffic in arms.

Villa, World Flyweight Champ Exhibits Here; Andrade-Volaire Fight

Big Night At Carlton; Title Holder Shows Off For Local Fans; A Remarkable Bout

The Palais de Danse would have been crowded to the doors last night had fight fans here been informed in time of the splendid exhibition that was going to be staged. As it was, there was a very good crowd, but one day's advertising is not sufficient, it appears, to pack the house, even when there is an exhibition by the world's champion flyweight, Pancho Villa, followed by a remarkable slugfest between two of the best lightweights that have ever appeared in Shanghai, Young Volaire and Andrade.

Villa, of course, was the great attraction. When he appeared in the ring, after a couple of good bouts between local boys, he received a great ovation, as was to have been expected. This youngster, with his boyish grin and happy reception of honors, gave an excellent impression, and smiled with simple and almost juvenile pride when Mr. Percival announced him.

VILLA'S EXHIBITION

Villa started off with a rope-skipping exhibition in which he showed about everything that could be done with a rope. Skipping, dancing, hopping, speedy rope-throwing in which he remained in the air while the rope whistled around him two or three times before his nimble feet touched the floor for second's rebound, double-shuffles, high kicking, everything, with the rope whistling and singing through the air, with never a halt or a misstep during the five or six minutes he skipped. Pretty nearly all that is imaginable in the way of rope-skipping Villa did, and if he had stopped there the crowd would have got their money's worth. Pancho, by the way, is the champion rope-skipper of the Philippines.

This was only a beginning, however, and Villa went right ahead to some other stuff. After a minute's rest he went on to a two-round exhibition bout with Leonardo Garcia. Though Garcia normally is a good bit heavier than the champ, Villa was a bit overweight after his easy life on the ship, so the margin was not more than about ten pounds.

Villa showed about everything he had in the way of speed and cleverness. First he let Garcia sock him in the face, then pound him a little in the kidneys and around the back, but when Leonardo got a bit tired and started lifting his knee into Pancho's rear he decided it was time to call a halt, and he swung around with a right which might have put Garcia out of the fighting game forever had it landed, but Garcia was a few inches away from it and survived.

In the second exhibition round there was some really speedy work from the champ, who showed what he could do in the way of dodging and ducking, and landing lightning-flash punches. He has a jab which moves several fractions of a second quicker than the ordinary eye, and which packs sufficient power behind it to put to sleep almost any normal human.

The other two exhibition rounds were with Macario Flores, former featherweight champion of the Pacific slope. Flores is one of the Flores family of fighters, a brother of Eleno and Irineo. Young Flores is a less famous brother. Macario is now travelling with Villa as a sparring partner.

In the ring yesterday the two concentrated their work upon Referee Percival, who demonstrated his remarkable ability in the line of ducking and side-stepping. Not that they ever hit him, of course, except accidentally, but somehow their sparring always hemmed Percival into a corner from which he couldn't get out, and then a right or left swing from one of them came into dangerous proximity to the valiant referee's jaw. Percival was game, however, and stuck it out until two rounds had been finished, when he was still on his feet and was unanimously adjudged a near-winner on points.

This part of the exhibition was very much enjoyed by many of the Filipino boys present, some of whom declared it the finest event of the evening.

Villa concluded his exhibition by a one-man musical show, singing a Filipino folk-song and accompanying himself on the ukelele, and followed this with a joyful melody, well-known to the Carlton community, referring to the definite and eternal cessation of rain. As a ukelele player, Villa isn't half bad. As a singer, he's a wonderful box-fighter.

Everyone appeared to like Villa. The many ladies who were present enjoyed it as much as anyone else. Mr. Villa, a very pretty young lady from the Philippines, was present at last night's exhibition to see her husband in his glory, which of course is nothing in dimensions to what Pancho is going to receive when he gets back home to Manila, and has a flotilla out to welcome him, and 20,000 brown compatriots will roar themselves hoarse in a great paean of welcome to the flyweight champion of the world.

REMARKABLE SLUGFEST

As if this were not enough, the promoters staged one of the most remarkable fights seen in Shanghai, between Young Volaire and Andrade. The two started in and slugged from start to finish, hardly bothering to guard at all, and landing an avalanche of knockout punches on both sides which had one or the other punch-groggy in almost every round of the twelve gruelling—did I say gruelling? I mean homicidal—rounds in which they stood up to one another.

As an additional attraction Mr. Francisco Villa, Pancho's foster-father, refereed this fight, Volaire weighed in at 132 pounds and Andrade at 135. How much they weighed at the finish history recordeth not, but they must have sweated off about six or eight pounds in the course of the fight. Both boys went in on a day's notice, but proved themselves to be in splendid shape Volaire had slightly injured hand, but no one would have guessed it to look at the way he landed on Andrade.

To go into details of the rounds would be but vain repetition such as the heathen delight in. The two just stood flat-footed and walloped one another. Volaire landed first with a right to the jaw, and the two swapped punches from then on. How they did slug! In the second Volaire landed often enough with rights and lefts to have Andrade punch-silly, but this cast-iron figure hung on, and in the next session turned the tables for a little while. The two were mixing hard when the gong rang, and Andrade landed a left in Volaire's solar plexus which doubled up the local boy just after the gong. Volaire was helped over to his corner, and was almost recovered at the start of the fourth round, but had to cover up and defend his stomach for a little while. After a minute's sparring, however, he felt all right again, and shot out with rights and lefts which got Andrade going again, but this marvelous punch-absorber kept right on.

The boys were getting faster with each round up to this time. Andrade's blows to the face earned him the fifth round, but in the sixth, after a little wariness, he caught Volaire a terrific crack which made the other boy cover up for a little while. He came back, however, before the end of the round.

They kept up the same exchange of wallops in the seventh, though a bit slower than before, and repeated in the eighth. In the ninth Andrade started in first, and shot across a left which staggered Volaire, but after a few moments the latter came back with a stiff left which knocked Andrade several feet across the ring. Volaire failed to follow this up, however, and Andrade recovered.

There was more slugging in the tenth. Both boys had cut lips already, and Volaire drew some more blood by a slam to Andrade's nose. In the eleventh it looked like a Kilkenny finish, as both boys were almost out, first Volaire and then Andrade, but they recovered sufficiently to hop into the twelfth like a couple of bearcats, and go to it hot and heavy till the final gong.

Volaire landed more wallops than the other boy, and in the opinion of many was entitled to the decision. The judges disagreed on the award, however, one favoring a draw and the other a Volaire decision, and the referee decided on a draw.

GOOD PRELIMS

After the big events of the evening it seems hardly worth while to mention the preliminary bouts. These were an attraction in themselves, however, and much above the ordinary run of ham-and-eggers.

In the curtain-raiser Frisco Peralto and Fighting Fernan went four rounds to a good draw. Both boys fought hard, and each was undoubtedly entitled to the decision which they split.

The second bout, De Dios versus Flores, was a good scrap, though de Dios hardly appeared to be trying, and Flores actually had the best of the fighting a good bit of the way. A draw decision was given by Canion, who refereed.

Wade Defeats Kuwabara In Finals Of Tennis Tournament Sunday Here

Toussaint And Canavarro Win Doubles From Noguchi And Hisai; Conclusion Of Splendid Tourney

In the closing events of the Open Lawn Tennis Tournament at the French Club, played Sunday last, there was some splendid playing, in spite of the wind and cold, which appeared to trouble the spectators a good bit more than the players.

In the Hardcourt Singles and Doubles Championships there were splendid matches, Mr. Wade defeating Mr. Kuwabara in the Singles and Messrs. Toussaint and Canavarro winning the Doubles from Messrs. Noguchi and Hisae. Mrs. Pearson and Toussaint beat Mr. and Mrs. Wade in the Mixed Doubles, Mrs. Pearson won the Ladies' Singles, from Mrs. Moss, and Mrs. Pearson and Mrs. Moss won the Ladies Doubles from Mrs. Elmore and Mrs. Martin.

In the match between Wade and Kuwabara the champion had to extend himself to the limit to win. He was slightly off form at the start, but improved as the match went on, and won out at the finish after losing two of the first three sets.

At the beginning Kuwabara took five straight games from the veteran. Wade took another, but the Japanese won the following, making the first set 6-1 for Kuwabara.

Wade recovered a bit in the next set, however, and won by 6-4 score, only to lose the third by 2 games to 6. After this the champion braced up, and utilised every bit of his skill and experience to meet his brilliant young opponent, particularly taking advantage of the cross-wind, and won the fourth set by six games to two, and the fifth by same score.

In the Men's Doubles Championship Toussaint and Canavarro won from Hisae and Noguchi. As always, the Japanese showed very brilliant work, particularly in their speed, their back-hand work, and their serving, and the European pair were forced to go the limit to beat them.

FINAL WINNERS

The final winners in the Tournament were as follows:

Open Tournament Championship:

Men's Singles, J. L. Wade;

Men's Doubles, Toussaint and Canavarro;

Mixed Doubles, Mrs. Pearson and Toussaint;

HANDICAP EVENTS

The American Tournament: 1st, Madame Straetmans and Loonis; 2nd, Mr. and Mrs. Evans; 3rd, Mrs. Bitgood and Krass, the latter only just passed the score of Mrs. Tilley and Peppercorn by half a point. There were more than twenty competitors in this American event.

After the conclusion of the matches Madam Donne presented the prizes for the handicap events, a most fitting conclusion to one of the most successful tournaments that have been held here.

Recreation Club Beats "Carlisle" Team, 2 Goals To 0

The Recreation Club's football team played a friendly game with the eleven from the British ship "Carlisle" at the Recreation Grounds Sunday, winning by a 2—0 score. The Recs put in a team consisting mostly of reserves and Second Division players, but they proved more than a match for the sailors, scoring both their goals in the first half.

In the second half, though many chances were offered to score, the Recs failed to add another goal, mainly due to poor kicking. Most of the play, however, was in the "Carlisle" 's half of the field, and the Recs' team showed general superiority to the sailors.

DEMPSEY DUE FOR TWO FIGHTS NEXT YEAR, IS REPORT

To Meet Wills July 4 And Gibbons Or Renault Before Then

Jack Dempsey is going to fight twice next Summer, it appears from present reports. The world's heavyweight champion will defend his title against Harry Wills on or about July 4. However, there is a big "but" about the battle with the giant colored man.

Said "but" has to do with Dempsey's first fight next year, as he has decided to take on one opponent before hooking up with Wills. The latter part of May he will face Jack Renault, Tom Gibbons, George Godfrey or the best man obtainable at that time.

Dempsey has beaten Gibbons, but failed to knock him out. Renault has come to the front in rapid strides and is still improving. The same may be said of Godfrey.

During the Winter it is possible that Tex Rickard will stage a series of bouts between these leading contenders and then the winner will fight Dempsey in the champion's 1925 debut.

Union Club Beats Southern University

The Union football club defeated Southern University team last Sunday afternoon on Pioneer Field by the score of 5 to nil. The weather was ideal for football, and about three hundred enthusiatic witnessed the game. Mr. K. S. Chang refereed.

The Union eleven won the toss, and played with the wind at their back. In the first 35 minutes the leather was almost on the college territory. Chen, the inside left, netted the first goal for the Union. The college eleven was somewhat out of practice and did not handle the ball so well as expected. The Union players pressed hard, and plied up the score to 4-0 by the end of first half.

On resumption of play the college eleven was quite aggressive and bombardment on the Union gaol but without avail. The Union center forward, Lee, was responsibe for the fifth goal or his team. When the final whistle was blown the score was 5-0 in favor of Union Club.

The Union club is scheduled to play the Marine Engineers on next Sunday afternoon, the 16th, on Pioneer Field. A close contest is expected.

"The COVERED WAGON"

A Paramount Production

Acclaimed by Leading Editors of the Entire Nation.
Read the Enthusiastic Reports of the New York Critics

To James Cruze's Paramount production, The Covered Wagon,' which had its premiere at the Criterion Theatre Friday evening, the critics of New York's daily newspapers have given unreserved praise.

"America's greatest motion picture," said the New York Commercial. "It should be shown to every citizen of this republic." And it will, if it is humanly possible to do so, for that was Paramount's idea, expressed from the moment that plans for the production began to take shape. That it will endure from generation to generation, as long as there are projection machines with which to show it, is not merely possible—It is inevitable, Paramount officials say.

"It is here at last!" said the "Evening Telegram." "The film that tells a great American story in a great way was unfolded last night in the Criterion Theatre. In 'The Covered Wagon' is found the American screen epic. Yes, 'The Covered Wagon' eclipses even 'The Birth of a Nation.' It is a far better story, with a far more wholesome atmosphere pervading it. The tale is as big as a Walt Whitman poem, as superb in its homespun dignity and courage as a speech by Abe Lincoln. Just think of the film which has given you the biggest thrill you ever had. No matter which one it may happen to have been "The Covered Wagon' eclipses it completely. A new frontier has been reached and a new standard set up in motion pictures."

"It is a scintillant, luminous, incandescent affair, which at times makes your pulses beat and gives you a score or so of throbs," said Alan Dale in the American. "It is an American picture but its spirit of adventure knows no nationality. Its appeal is universal, made to all the youth and the unyouth who can appreciate the pioneer wonders that have built up the West. To miss 'The Covered Wagon' would be to miss a film that absolutely removes the industry from its much vaunted and over-advertised 'infancy.'"

"For natural comedy and downright human touch it is unsurpassed," said the "Journal of Commerce." "It is an enthralling spectacle, a tense and moving drama of picturesque human interest, that takes its place among the modern masterpieces of screen art."

"There is one adjective that one thinks of first," said Robert E. Sherwood in the "Herald." "That adjective is 'honest.' The picture is honest in its simplicity, in its fidelity, in its sincerity and in its regard for the importance of its theme. It has been extensively advertised and exploited. Well, for once the advertisements don't lie. "The Covered Wagon' is worthy of the best in the way of superlatives that its press agents have to offer."

"In this instance superlatives find justification," wrote Helen Pollock in the "Telegraph," and such tried and trusty terms of 'immense,' 'gigantic,' 'heroic' correctly describe a scale of this praiseworthy Paramount production. We have heard a lot about "bigger and better' pictures—'The Covered Wagon' is both.

"It's interesting," said the "Times" critic. "It gives you something detailed and definite for your interest to centre upon. Its scenes speak to you. Many of them have the quality of greatness. They are unforgetable."

"It is doubtful if even the officials of the Paramont company, who voted for this one the largest advertising appropriation ever spent on any of their pictures, knew what a tremendous impression the picture would make," said Beauvais Fox in the "Tribune." It is the first real American epic of the screen. Genuinely thrilling from start to finish."

"We take great pleasure," said Quinn Martin in the "World," "in throwing back our head on this occasion and uttering a piercing 'Bravo!' in recognition of the arrival from one of our own cinema camps of a picture play which is as good as gold. This sounds as if we have been carried away in our enthusiasm over a motion picture. That is no dream. We have been."

"The Hough disciples held that the filming of the story was a sacred trust," said the "Evening Journal," "that it was a marvelous tribute to the breed of real men and women who settled the North-west and that any director or company who failed to do it full justice should be considered a pariah. As this writer has tried to say, everyone should be satisfied with the results even to the extent of arising and giving three cheers and a tiger."

"It had the ring of truth and was inspiring. Not one lagging moment," said the "Evening Mail." In the opinion of the "Sun" reviewer it is "the finest picture of America by Americans. We recommend the picture unqualifiedly to everyone whatever his taste in the theatre or in movies."

"The picture in many of its scenes is breath-taking," said the "Evening World." "When Paramount officials declared, for James Cruze who made the picture, that hundreds of men and women remained out on the prairies undergoing hardships for months to give this story to movie lovers, those who saw it last night believed it implicitly."

"What makes this picture so genuinely worth while," said the "Globe," "is its atmosphere of pioneer days, its spirit of restlessness and adventure, of breaking new oil, of blazing, fresh trails, of digging for gold. Herein it is history recounted and made vivid. Herein it reaches heights of sincerity and rugged beauty, is magnificent and gripping and comes near to being an American epic."

"An earnest stubbornness and courage," said the "Daily News." "You should not miss this picture. It has something for every one."

And the "Evening Post:" "With great artistic skill this thrilling period of American history is pictured. The production leaves one with a genuine feeling of patriotic love and admiration."

Boys Applaud Teacher Who Utilised The Hose

Elmsford, N.Y., Oct. 9.—A meeting of the Board of Trustees of the school here tonight to decide whether Howard G. Holden, the Principal, should be permitted to continue to impose corporal punishment on his pupils to enforce discipline, broke up in wild acclaim for the Principal after the Chairman of the trustees, Nicholas F. Sheridan, had put to the 300 persons who crowded the school auditorium the question as to whether Holden should be sustained.

The five trustees, after a two-hour session, in which anywhere from one to four persons spoke at a time, had agreed to hold another meeting next Wednesday afternoon before they gave a decision on the matter. A piece of rubber hose, about a foot long, and which Principal Holden had admitted using on unruly pupils was dangled frequently before the gathering and almost invariably it evoked laughter and cheers from the pupils in the room and those who lined the windows outside of the auditorium.

Mr. Sheridan, the Chairman of the board, at the beginning of the meeting had declared that the implement of punishment had been in use for so long a period that it no longer held a sting, but near the close of the meeting Mrs. William Clark, one of those opposed to corporal punishment, sprang from her seat, grabbed the hose out of the Chairman's hands, and inflicting blows on several of the trustees demanded, "Now, see if that doesn't hurt!"

"No! No," came from the pupils of Principal Holden inside and outside of the auditorium, while the men and women in the room laughed and jeered at Mrs. Clark's demonstration in opposition to the matter of corporal punishment in the Elmsford school.

That was only one of the many exciting incidents in connection with the proposal to abolish corporal punishment in the school. Most of them were about or encouraged by the pupils, who obviously were having the time of their lives in showing their loyalty to their principal.

It was evident that less than forty men and women present were in favor of taking from Principal Holden from his authority to resort to corporal punishment in keeping his pupils in hand. Every time one of them, including Otto Sipel, Thomas F. English and Robert Lorzing, the three trustees who were for abolishing that form of punishment in the school, arose to speak, the pupils were to first to lead off with jeers and shouts, such as "We want Holden; we want the rubber hose!"

When the trustees opened the meeting at 8 p.m. the first four or five rows of spectators' seats were occupied by boys and girls, who had appeared at the entrance two hours before to make sure that they would have points of vantage from which to offer encouragement to the cause of Principal Holden. Chairman Sheridan had hardly finished outlining the purpose of the meeting to the assembled populace of Elmsford when the children began to show their disapproval of the movement against the principal.

They snickered and giggled as they slyly pointed to signs which they had posted on sides of the auditorium, which read: "We want Holden!" "Hose and Holden!" and "We're 100 per cent. for Holden!" Chairman Sheridan put on his sternest face as he declared with his eyes trained on the older persons in the rear of the room. "This meeting must be taken seriously. We are met here to decide a serious question—whether we shall abolish corporal punishment in Elmsford school or keep our hands off."

Australian Aborigine's Life Object Is Hunting

In his element the Australian black is a wonderful personality; out of it he is a tragic, and often degraded, figure, writes the Adelaide correspondent of "The London Times."

It is a matter for deep regret that these amazing people are fast disappearing. Efforts to reclaim them have been so belated and spasmodic, so lacking in real and sustained earnestness, so sadly inadequate that only in the narrowing spheres of their fenceless domains can the noble and intensely interesting tribe be said to be holding their own numerically. Even there the shrinkage is only too apparent, but the natives are true to type, with their splendid powers of physical endurance, unrivalled strategy in hunting and fine skill in the primitive arts.

There is little doubt that the Australian aboriginal is a living representative of the fossil man of the Stone Age; most scientists are agreed upon that. He uses an ordinary fragment of stone, just as nature made it, for pounding, cracking and cutting purposes, like an Archaeolithic man. He chips the edge of other chosen fragments, much like a Palaeolith man, and he grinds and polishes other implements and weapons he makes much like a Neolithic man. He embodies in one, therefore, all the stages we have so carefully defined in the classification of the fossil men of Europe.

The aboriginal of Australia is a born hunter. His sole desire and object of existence is to hunt. Most of his time is, in consequence, spent on the march. He has no permanent abode, and yet it would not be quite correct to call him a nomad, because he confines his wanderings strictly to the boundaries of his hereditary tribual haunts. Only when on mischief bent, or when on the warpath, is he guilty of trespassing. His favorite weapon is the spear, either plain or barbed, with which he approaches both animal and man. He projects this missile with a spear-thrower, a flat, or cylindrical stick with a hook at one end to receive the end of the spear. The greater leverage thus obtained gives him every advantage in hurling the weapon for a considerable distance with wonderful accuracy.

Although weapons are freely used in open warfare, the natives prefer to "doom" their individual to death by pointing the magic "bone" at them, or in the direction of the hostile camp. When the victim notices the act, or is informed of its perpetration, he will be as certain to die as night follows day. By sheer worry he becomes sick and then lies down to await death.

The only thing that can save him under these circumstances is the counter charm of one of the tribe's medicine men, known as crawl on to the prostate form of the sufferer, and after a goodly amount of kneading, biting and sucking he goes through some peculiar antics, finally disgorging "Nangarri." This old sorcerer will the contents of his mouth into his hands. The old fellow cleverly produces a small piece of bone or stone, which he triumphantly holds before the face of the terrified patient. This is claimed to be the cause of the trouble, and henceforth the evil influence will be banished. Almost immediately the candidate of death begins to recover and soon he will be strong enough to think of revenge.

FAMOUS MUSICIAN FIDDLES FOR PENNIES

PETER VAN DER MEER with

When he made his American debut in Carnegie Hall, New York City, in 1908, Peter van der Meer was acclaimed by musicians as a master violinist. Stricken with blindness in 1915, he has been making his way about the country, playing his violin in the streets. Recently his marvelous playing attracted a gathering outside a Pittsburgh, Pa., hotel, which made up an attractive purse for him. His story became known and helping hands arranged to send him South, where he will regain his shattered health and return to concert playing.

Instructions From Tokio Show Little Change In Position

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Nov. 9.—Mr. Yoshizawa, Japanese Minister, having received instructions from the Tokio Government concerning the counter-proposal tendered by the Soviet delegate on October 30 as regards the provisions of an agreement over the rights in North Saghalien, it is expected that the Soviet-Japanese conference will be resumed tomorrow after a ten day's suspension and that it will be brought to an end before long.

LITTLE CHANGE

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Nov. 9.—The Eastern News Agency learns that the new proposals to be submitted by the Japanese Government relating to the provisions in principle as to the rights in North Saghalien are in the main similar to the original proposals. Especially, with regard to the quota question, the Japanese delegate is expected to adhere to his former assertion.

It is understood that the Imperial Government of Japan has given instructions to the Japanese delegate concerning not only the question of rights in North Saghalien but also the Nikolavisk Affair and the treaty question as well, with a view to concluding the present Soviet-Japanese conference as soon as possible provided an agreement is reached amicably over the question of the rights.

Judging, however, from the past attitude of the Soviet Government, it is inferred that some further complications are inevitable before the conference will be concluded.

He Wrote To General Wu Pei-fu In Letters Of His Own Blood

Editor's Note:—A few days ago The China Press had a story about a Chinese student in the United States who felt so strongly on the war and disturbed political situation in China that he wrote an appeal to his countrymen and particularly the military leaders urging them to settle their differences peacefully—and for writing fluid the student used his own blood in place of ink. The manuscript was written in Chinese and consisted of some 48 pages of text, one page of which is reproduced herewith. When translated the manuscript was found to consist of an appeal to Generals Wu Pei-fu, Chang Tso-lin, Sun Yat-sen and to the Chinese people at large. The letter to General Wu printed here is typical of the others. Mr. Wu Tse-jui, the writer of the heroic document, who sacrificed a portion of his own blood for this novel purpose, is a student of medicine at the Blossburg State Hospital of Blossburg, Pa. He is a graduate of the Peking Union Medical College and a native of Fukien Province.

BY WU TSE-JUI

In view of present state of affairs in China, whilst political order is at sixes and sevens, judicial organs being at low ebb, industry, agriculture, commerce being either disregarded or little regarded, and above all bandits and cut-throats abounding everywhere and anywhere within the so-called "four seas," one can only heave a long-drawn sigh, being at his wits end to render a helping hand.

The establishment of the Republic thirteen years ago bore a bona fide purpose—to establish peace and order.

But now every one perceives that innumerable disturbances, both petty clash and bigger war, causing much bloodshed, have found their existence since the overthrowing of the Manchu throne, with a result which shows that a republic is not any better than anarchy. The worst of these agitations is manifested in the wars between Kiangsu and Chekiang and Fengtien and Chihli, when warlords of over-assumed powers clash just because of some petty reasons or self-interest, and which have killed thousands of human beings, and broken hundreds of households. Within the area of the torrid zone, which principally includes Liuho, Hwangtu, Nanxiang and other places a casual traveller will witness countless habitations broken down by guns and bonfires, and struggling fugitives huddled together in vacant places, in one vast brotherhood of helpless wretchedness.

To remedy such situations war should be deprecated; then considerable time should be spent toward the restoration of order and peace. If that is done China may still gain a seat in the family of nations.

NO UNION BY FORCE

A man wise and sensible as you are must have known the evil effects of war. But I wonder why you should still rely upon military means for unifying China. China, as she is now, is in a very unsteady state; but any coercive efforts to bring about her unification will surely make her condition much worse. Although the the opposing parties may be thereby brought to submission, they are directed by force and not willingness, and as soon as they recover their strength they will raise arms against you as before. This process may go on unceasingly for centuries and yet the unification of China will not be realised. Moreover, it is not the few military leaders, but the numerous innocent citizens who really suffer from this great disaster; for it is not their own lives that are lost nor their own blood that is shed, nor their own money that is wasted. Thus, instead of subjugating the opposing parties in order to unify China, you will extinguish the whole nation. When China is unified according to your plan there will be no people left. Oh! why should you take such a foolish step?

Viewing from the standpoint of the people, China is now really unified. This has been frequently shown by the unanimous patriotic movements of the whole nation in matters concerning both national and international problems, and to express any different opinion would be utterly impossible.

NO NEED FOR WAR

Such being the case, so far as the people are concerned, there is no need for such harsh means as war for unifying the country. The only thing that has led to this violent warfare is apparently party strife. The dominance of one party over another is now considered by its members as more important than the welfare of the whole nation. Thus, despite the sufferings of the millions of brothers and sisters, they are trying to achieve their aims through blood and iron. There are many political parties in foreign countries and each party attempts to defeat its rival. But military means have never been used by them as the proper instruments for accomplishing their aims, and the prosperity of their own parties has never been put before the welfare and peace of their countries at large. That is why the foreign nations are unified and so strong. Now, can such a condition exist in the political parties of China? Can the parties in China reach their respective goals in the same manner and through the same means as the parties in foreign countries do? There is certainly no ground for answering in the negative.

You are a patriot and China means very much to you—I am sure of that. Therefore, will you, for the sake of the whole nation, give up your wrong plan which has so far misled you, and search for some better means that may lead to the true unification of China?

We all know that Abraham Lincoln waged the Civil War, but he did not make war for war's sake; he made it because he was forced to do so in carrying out his best polity. Now, what is the purpose of the civil war in our country? What good policy do we have?

During our civil war, foreign governments sent forces to our country to protect their people, but we were killing our brothers and destroying their homes without pity. Oh, how shameful and foolish it is!

LOVE OF COUNTRY

Now, you should change your mind at once and love your country as your family so that every great man will help each other in order to make our country stronger and stronger.

Is there any other nation which should be loved by us except our beloved China? Is there any other government which should be served by us except that of our Great Republic? Oh, my great General, there is no other nation which is dearer to us than our own country. Why do you not get up at once to serve her?

The Republic of China is a country of the people. Therefore, the only way to rule the country is the respect for the expression of public will. If this plan is replaced by military force and other means no peace will be found and the condition of the country will constantly become worse. In order to escape from this condition you must return to a straightforward acceptance of the principle that military despotism must be given up, regardless of personal advantage and ambitions, and the will of the whole nation must be carefully carried out.

If there were some who still tried to continue personal controversies and self-seeking actions, then they would be traitors, and we would have to do our best to overthrow them.

Life is very short but the work can never be finished. Since the time is not enough for us to do good work, how can we do evil things? I wish God would give you a hundred years to do your good work, but I would not wish God to give you even a single day to make people suffer.

WORDS OF THE SAGES

You are a learned man and you have studied the books of our ancient saints. You should not forget the doctrine of our saints in order to save our country through these means. When Mr. Nan Tson Yaun of Song Dynasty was a Shu Tsai (B.A.) he made up his mind to serve his country. Afterwards he did a great service and therefore became one of the famous heroes in our history. Moreover, there were many famous men in the Wu family. The stories of Wu Ta Pun and Wu Gee Ssua have left a deep impression in the hearts of Chinese for a long period. Why do you not try to follow their steps?

Then, what should you do now?

A great hero can do as he pleases. Since you are a great man you should change your mind as soon as you can. You know clearly that China has in the recent past suffered great injury because of personal controversies of politicians and military governors. You know that we must try our best to save our country now otherwise she will no longer exist in the world. You should feel repentance for your former mistakes and do what you ought to do.

Now, my policy in saving our country may be briefly summarised as follows:

(1) Give up the policy of military despotism and stop the war at once.

(2) Send a joint circular to the whole nation that you repent of your former faults.

(3) Send representatives to General Chang Tso-lin and Dr. Sun Yat-sen to make peace with them.

(4) Stop the civil war in Kwangtung, Kwangse and Shanghai and maintain peace.

(5) Advise the leaders of your party to declare against the policy of military force.

(6) Make the officials to accept the principle that the law must be adhered to regardless of personal advantage and ambition.

(7) Start a movement towards compulsory education of soldiers.

(8) Stop recruiting soldiers, disband the present troops, and use the soldiers for some constructive work.

(9) Advise the military officers to invest capital in opening mines and developing natural resources.

(10) A carefully planned meeting should be held to repent our former mistakes and settle the great problems of our country.

FUNDAMENTAL METHODS

The above-mentioned principles are the fundamental methods in saving the country. Although the third principle is comparatively hard too carry into effect yet to a real hero it is of no difficulty at all. As regard the sixth and eighth principles, they seem to be impossible for us to do now, but I think only a real patriot knows how to promote and facilitate the development of our country and never try to make personal controversies with others. The ninth principle is also very easy for us to do. Although China is very poor now, yet most of the military officers are rich indeed. Instead of putting their money in foreign banks and getting a small amount of interest they can invest their capital in opening natural recources to make far greater benefit. It is certainly very advantageous to them.

Again, the party strife had not only tormented the poor innocent citizens of China but also shaken the position of China in the family of nations. The reasons for saying this are many. But suffice it to mention one of them only, that is, through the party strife the foreigners find the Chinese people cannot live harmoniously together by themselves; in other words, that the Chinese, common citizens as well as men on duty in the government, are not qualified to govern themselves. Whenever war takes place there is disorder, and a great many people come under the protection of the foreign settlements and foreign churches and things like that. This shows that the people of China can no longer enjoy the rights of citizens, the protection from danger and the security of right, afforded by the government and that there is no efficient political organ in China to govern the country.

AN ETERNAL DISGRACE

This being true, it naturally follows that China has to be taken care of by some one else in order to be capable of existing in the world as a country. In that case, China goes under the control of other nations; that is to say, under international control. Even though this may not be the real situation, she can at least no longer hold a completely independent position in the world.

No sensible man wishes his country to be dependent upon other nations and himself a slave of other people, because that is an eternal disgrace.

How can China, for your ambition only, be put in such as shameful position? How will you answer your millions of brothers and sisters who are simply pulled by you into the water?

I am a common citizen and scarcely ever express myself as I am doing now. But the present situation has struck me so much that I cannot abstain from presenting you my advice for the sake of our country.

This letter is written with my blood, therefore, I think, what I say may be the general idea of all the people. At the same time I also give this advice to General Chang Tso-lin and Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

If you find my words reasonable, please change your mind now when it is not yet too late for you to repent of your former mistakes. In that case, I shall certainly be very obliged to you.

Very Sincerely yours,
WU TSE-JUE.

ROBERT HOTUNG ISSUES ANOTHER PEACE MANIFESTO

Urges Militarists To Lay Down Arms For Round-Table Conference

Sir Robert Hotung, the Hongkong financier and peace advocate, has issued a telegram, urging the militarists to lay down their arms and solve the national problems by a round-table conference. Sir Robert was due to arrive in Hongkong yesterday and his friends here say that he would come to Shanghai very shortly in time to participate in the "Elder Statesmen's Conference" to be held in Tientsin. The telegram was addressed to Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, Marshal Chang Tso-lin and General Feng Yu-hsiang.

A Translation of his message follows.

"Internal strife has continued for years in the country. Moved by the sufferings of the whole nation, I have been travelling extensively from North to South to advocate internal peace. Although my ideas were endorsed by the various interests through letters and telegrams, dissension still persisted on account of the difference in views and private interests.

Consequently, war was waged between Kiangsu and Chekiang, a clash was also started in the North-east and the battle field was extended to the very gates of Peking and Tientsin, while the entire nation is becoming involved in the general conflict.

As I was abroad and was not acquainted with the conditions at home, I can not tell whether this fight will conclude the chaos which has been reigning for the last 13 years or whether this is merely the beginning of a general devastation which would be beyond repairs. My heart burns when I think of the future of the nation.

It is a fact recognised by both Chinese and foreigners that the holding of administrative power by militarists was at the bottom of all this trouble. Since the positions and wealth of the nation are limited but their ardor for such is not limited, brothers have to battle against their brothers to secure them. Now that an opportunity for reconstruction has presented itself, unless the militarists realise the necessity of abandoning their military power, call a conference of peace, take orders from the people and scrap the entire military system, no permanent peace can ever be secured, while the spirit of revenge will be increased and the same tragedy which has been just staged will repeat itself and even on a more elaborate scale.

We need only look at the march of events during the recent years in order to satisfy ourself of the suicidal policy which has been adopted by the men in power. The rise and fall of the nation, the life and death of our race will depend upon the present turn in our national life. On your shoulders rest the responsibility of the salvation of the people. My heart yearns when I state my views with the hope that you will give them your mature consideration."

To Travel 400,000 Miles For Hobby In Rug-Collecting

cause of its ancient priority; then India with its close affiliation to the best in Persia; Asia minor with its important rug centers, such as Ghiordes, Koula, Bergama, Ladik and Oushak; next the Caucasus, largely because it follows in territorial sequence; China next to last, which, although most ancient of all, produced rugs for our consideration only in modern times; and finally a miscellaneous group which includes the Central Asia rugs.

The path of the rug collector is not easy, tales related by Mr. Ballard yesterday indicate. Three years ago he heard of a Sejuk Turkish "hird" rug, such as he had been looking for for many years, in Constantinople. In Europe at the time he took the Oriental express for the capital of Turkey. At a border station before reaching Adrianople, the train was held up by Greeks, then at war with Turkey, at 1 o'clock in the morning and he was taken off with a British traveling companion. A commanding officer, however, heard his diplomatic story and Mr. Ballard and companion were given a special military guide to show them the sights of the city. Immediately after reaching Constantinople he was shown the "bird" rug which he had sought for so long. Before he could leave with the rug a mob from Stamboul, making a demonstration over the capture of Smyrna, shot up the town, killing four people in the hotel where Mr. Ballard was staying. The next day he got away on a boat bound for Smyrna. Great numbers of dead bodies floated by the boat enroute.

IMPERIAL RUG

Early this year on a previous visit, Mr. Ballard was successful in purchasing a fine imperial rug from the emperor of China in Peking.

One of Mr. Ballard's most interesting bits is a fragment of an Indian silk rug. It is one-sixteenth of an inch thick and was made up of 920 hand-tied knots to the square inch. The weave, Mr. Ballard says, could weave only two square inches in a day, so that the rug was 25 years in the making.

In the Ballard collection one finds choicest examples of Persian pieces, Asia Minor, Indian, Caucasian, Chinese and other miscellaneous rugs of rare quality.

"There is no expression in any line or art that suggests greater dignity of design, a more subdued harmony, blending soft seasoned color schemes, conveying the impression of warmth and magnificence, than is woven in rugs of the world," Mr. Ballard said.

WORLD TRIBUTE

"The inspiration of the weavers who conceived the glorious designs and peerless colors has left a great tribute to the world. There is a ravishing loveliness which comes over them every time I see them. There is a fascinating charm which comes upon me, which takes possession of my soul, and the grandeur and subtle magnificence of them passes belief.

"These old weavers understood the charm of surprise and contrast. The Persian and Indian weavers were masters of curves, symmetry and rythm. The Turks were masters in color and produced tones and shades of intoxicating beauty.

"In the whole realm of objects assembled by the collector, the most interesting things that could be formed into a collection, in my opinion, are: Early Oriental rugs, tapestries, velvets, brocades, Chinese porcelains, old paintings and books—early Oriental rugs, of the various types, heading the list; first, because of the extreme beauty of the colors and designs; second, because of their symbolic importance; and third, on account of their historical and religious significance.

ANCIENT THOUGHTS

"These symbols carry us back to past ages. They are full of love, passion, sentiment, religion, mysticism, tragedy and tribal tradition. Some of these rugs have passed through war, riot, bloodshed—mute witnesses of robbery, pillage and murder. They have made pilgrimages over the hot sands of deserts, on the backs of camels, crossed oceans, and finally found a peaceful haven where they may remain another half century to be reverently loved and admired, then to come into another period of unrest and warfare, and through that into still another ownership. Almost all really old rugs have passed through this experience."

Rugs from China, Mr. Ballard says, generally have a delightful characteristic, quickly recognised, of a field of buff, yellow or light orange, with contrasting dark and light blue tones almost inevitably associated with it. The simplicity of Chinese rugs differentiates them materially from other groups of the orient. Favorite motifs are floral forms, especially the peony; animal forms, especially the dragon or hydra; the running fret, or meander pattern; the swastika; and various characters.

declared that he had had no direct communication with the Christian General, but that he had sent an emissary to confer with Marshal Tuan Chi-jui at Tientsin.

When asked regarding the possible plans of Marshal Wu Pei-fu, General Sun expressed the opinion that Wu will proceed as quickly as possible to Hupeh Province. An emissary from Marshal Wu is supposed to be in Nanking today attending a conference with Marshal Chi Hsien-yuan and representatives of the eight so-called Yangtsze Provinces. Marshal Sun's advice to Wu Pei-fu now is to make peace as quickly as possible and stop fighting for the present. The proposal for a new "Yangtsze Alliance" has the approval of the Hangchow Governor, but he stated most emphatically that it must be an alliance into which all interests enter on an equal basis and that no one must have an advantage over the others.

FRIENDLY WITH CHI

Marshal Sun Chuan-fang reiterated his friendship for Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan of Kiangsu, and repeated his previous statement that he has sent many telegrams of friendship to the Kiangsu Governor. As reasons why Chekiang and Kiangsu must work together, Marshal Sun stated that in his opinion the Peking Government is not now being operated satisfactorily, hence the necessity for an alliance in the Yangtsze Valley to help the government. As to what is being discussed in the Nanking Conference today, Marshal Sun would not say, but indicated that the questions are so important that the delegates have not been given full authority and must report important questions back to their respective headquarters for advice before taking action. Marshal Sun disapproves of any move, rumored recently to change the Capital of the Republic from its present location.

According to information in Marshal Sun's possession at the time of the interview, Marshal Tuan Chi-jui is still in Tientsin and that Sun is expecting an emissary from Tuan at any time with the Anfu leader's last word as to peace plans for China. "The Chinese people are tired of war," in Marshal Sun's opinion and to quote his own words, "any reasonable peace plans now decided upon will receive his profound approval and support."

As to his choice for President of the Republic, Marshal Sun would not make a statement, but said, "Any man who has the support and approval of the people will receive my support."

Marshal Sun does not think that a working alliance on the part of Tuan Chi-jui, Feng Yu-hsiang and Chang Tso-lin is humanly possible and that sooner or later one or two of them will have to be eliminated.

When asked regarding conditions in his own domains of Chekiang and Fukien, Marshal Sun said that conditions were stable in Fukien and that he has every confidence in the ability of Tuli Chow Yin-jen to preserve the peace.

HSIA FRIENDLY

Marshal Sun asserted that his relationship with the Civil Governor of Chekiang, Hsia Chao, has been cordial. In fact all the troops in his province and the people have been friendly towards him. He now controls the administration of provincial affairs, having his own men in all the important positions. The bureau of education and the courts of law are the only institutions which have not yet been touched by him. All other important jobs have been filled by his nominees.

The Chekiang chief is convinced that he has many loyal supporters in the army, including General Hsia Chao-lin, commander of the fourth division, General Hsia Hun-hsun, garrison commissioner of Sungkiang, General Lu Shan-ting and General Meng Chao-yu whom he brought over from Fukien, General Chow Feng-chi, commander of the first division of Chekiang troops and General Liu Yung-shen, formerly garrison commissioner of Shanghai now stationed in Pootung.

Marshal Sun does not expect any trouble in Ningpo. He says that the port is well protected from military intrigue as he has two divisions and one brigade guarding the surroundings. He also admits having stationed about 20,000 troops along the Shanghai-Hangchow Railway and in Kiangsu territory. In Hangchow city he has about 4,000 of his own men performing garrison duty.

In referring to conditions in Chekiang especially, Marshal Sun said that owing to present conditions, it will be necessary for him to maintain all present taxes in force, but will not add any new taxes to burden the people. Neither does he favor any foreign loan for the rehabilitation of the Province.

When asked especially regarding the cigarette taxes instituted by his predecessors, Marshal Sun stated that the cigarette taxes are not a tax upon foreign goods, but a tax upon Chinese smokers only. This tax was established by the old administration, said Marshal Sun, and he desires to point out that all moneys received through this tax is paid direct to the good roads fund and that none of it will be used by him for military expense. General Sun said that while he was in Shanghai he had had many conferences with Mr. Wang Jui-ki, chief of the cigarette tax bureau relative to proposals from certain foreign cigarette companies regarding special privileges in exchange for cash advances. General Sun said that he still had the matter under consideration and that within a month he would be in a position to announce his decision on this matter brought to his attention by the tobacco interests.

Senator Lodge, Foe Of League, Taken By Death

Review. In 1876, he was admitted to the bar at Boston.

His entrance into politics came in 1880, when he was elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives. From 1887 to 1893, he sat in the Federal House of Representatives, and in the latter year was elected United States Senator for Massachusetts, a position which he had held continuously since that time as a result of many re-elections.

Over a long period of years, Senator Lodge was a powerful figure in the Republican "stand-pat" ranks. He was permanent chairman of the Republican national conventions in 1900 and 1908, and chairman of the committee on resolutions in 1904 and 1916.

In the field of diplomacy, Senator Lodge is best known for his efforts as commissioner plenipotentiary for the United States at the Washington Disarmament Conference of 1921.

Senator Lodge was the author of many books on various phases of American history and political development, chief among which are "A Short History of the English Colonies in America;" "The Life of Alexander Hamilton;" "The Life of Daniel Webster;" "Life of Washington;" "Certain Accepted Heroes and Other Essays in Literature and Politics;" "Story of the Revolution;" "Story of the Spanish War;" "One Hundred Years of Peace;" "Democracy of the Constitution and Other Essays."

This book is recently published by the China Trade Bureau, New York, and commanding a large market in America. It contains an exhaustive discussion on the past, present and future of the trade relations between the United States and China in four parts and eighteen chapters. The author devotes much attention to the individual articles of imports and exports, and also to the British, Japanese, German and other competitions with American commercial interests in China. The value of this book can be realized from the following comment made by the China Weekly Review in one of its editorials (Aug. 16, 1924; pp. 355-6.).

"We wish it were possible to reproduce the book completely in the columns of the Review, but that is impossible; so the next best thing is to recommend its careful perusal by merchants and also by officers interested in the changes and transitions taking place in this market. Without question, it is one of the most significant works on this subject which has appeared in recent years."

Is Learning Chinese An Asset Worth The Effort To Foreign Business Men?

A Discussion Pro And Con Of The Advantages Of Learning the Vernacular And Several Pertinent Observations

By Geo. W. Missemer

One of the problems which confront the younger business man in China is whether the time and labor involved in learning more or less of the Chinese language is worth the effort in practical monetary results or whether the time that is required to learn enough of the language to make it of practical use had not better be devoted to specialising in the particular lines to which the merchant is now devoting or hopes to devote his attention. This is a subject on which there is much to be said on both sides, and herewith are presented some of the arguments pro and con.

In the first place it is to be remembered that there is a distinction to be made as regards the head of a large firm and a mere salesman. It is argued for example that the success of the German and Japanese merchants in China generally is largely due to the fact that they know Chinese. Now, as a matter of fact, very few of the heads of the large German or Japanese firms can speak any Chinese whatever. As regards the Japanese merchants they naturally can read Chinese fairly well for as a matter of fact when a Japanese writes what he considers the best of Japanese the characters and construction of the sentence is practically identical with what a Chinese considers the best Chinese. A Japanese merchant therefore has this advantage that he can read most any Chinese document. But the spoken language is quite a different matter and it is a fact that may not be generally known that the Japanese as a class (meaning those who try to speak Chinese) cannot who try to speak Chinese cannot the majority of European and American missionaries do.

LANGUAGE AND CHARACTER

It is argued by some that a knowledge of the Chinese language helps a person to know the character of the Chinese, but this is only partly true. But it is hardly a good argument to say that because the Japanese know considerable of the Chinese language they have learned to understand the Chinese better, for the history of Chino-Japanese relations, during the past decade particularly, would show that the Japanese are far from understanding the Chinese. The success of German merchants and Japanese merchants is to be found to a very great extent in other directions than their knowing the Chinese language. In the case of the Germans it is has largely been due to the assiduity, and at present it is more due to the fact that they are able to quote considerably cheaper prices. As regards the Japanese the principal asset in their success has been their propinquity and all the advantages that go with that.

It is too much to say that the learning of a language is a "gift," because any one, no matter how little adapted to the study of a foreign language, can eventually learn it if he will apply himself assidously enough to it. But it is a fact that the number of those who "take" to the learning of a foreign language is comparatively few and with them it frequently becomes a sort of a "fad," and very rarely indeed is it that one who is "gifted"—to use the prevailing expression—in the learning of a foreign language combines at the same time the qualities of a good business man.

NOTABLE EXAMPLES

To the one who takes up the study of Chinese with genuine pleasure, and that is really the only way to acquire sufficient proficiency to make it of practical value, he frequently finds that his brain is unconsciously devoting itself to solving the peculiarities of the Chinese language rather than to solving the numerous business problems which confront him. There are numerous examples of expert Chinese scholars, some of them professional men at that, who have the greatest difficulty in making a living, whereas others in the same line who speak no Chinese whatever enjoy a large clientele. Where the qualities of a good business man are combined with a facility for learning Chinese the result is a most happy one, and there are several notable examples of that in Shanghai, particularly among those who got their first training in the missionary field.

But the advantage of a knowledge of Chinese—a speaking knowledge, for a knowledge of written Chinese is practically beyond the realms of practicability for the average merchant—is greatly overrated by those who the young merchant in China to study Chinese. If a knowledge of Chinese were such a wonderful asset, the Portuguese community of Shanghai ought to be on the highway to prosperity, but as a matter of fact never was the Portuguese community here as a whole in such economic straits as it is at the present time. Indeed their experience is one of the examples cited by those who do not place much stock in a value of Chinese.

The Portuguese community of Shanghai as a whole had been trained in the old style methods. In the line of bookkeeping and accountancy, which has been their speciality, they are being rapidly superseded by the younger generation of Chinese, who, trained in more modern methods, can not only do more work and do it better, but are willing to work for smaller salaries. It comes to this then, to take the Portuguese as an example, that if they had spent more time at their specialty or devoted their time to some other profitable line and thought less about Chinese they would now be a great deal better off financially.

Without wishing to discourage any one who feels that he has the ability to acquire both an expert knowledge of his business and a practical working knowledge of Chinese, the purpose of this article is to point out that the problem for him to solve is whether he really combines those abilities. If he can accomplish both, well and good.

But the point he has to bear in mind is this. Conditions are now quite different than they were twenty years ago say. Then the knowledge of English among the Chinese was a rather rare accomplishment. But in these days with the many thousands of students who have acquired a working knowledge of English, it comes to this that in every large Chinese firm either one of the managers or relatives or employees can speak ever so much better English than the foreigner can ever hope to speak Chinese.

Chinese, after all is said and done—and particularly spoken Chinese—is as exceedingly difficult proposition, and the difficulties are ever so much accentuated by the fact that here in Shanghai, where are concentrated the Chinese most prominent in China's business field, the dialect, if learned, becomes useless beyond a radius of thirty miles. Beyond that radius some dialect of the official language is spoken. It is almost hopeless for the average business man to learn two or more dialects and still attend to his business and that, under present circumstances, would almost be necessary. The differences between the dialects in some parts of China are so great that when Chinese from those two sections meet they prefer to speak English, or some other foreign language that they have mutually learned, rather than to try to understand each others' dialects.

Our last report was dated 31st ult.

The markets have shown considerably more animation than for the past few weeks and are generally firmer, with Silkmen more optimistic, the more so as Japans have advanced, Shinshu No. 1 being quoted Yen 1,980 with a steady market.

Tsatlee New Style. Demand has been chiefly for Medium grade at Tls. 815-22½ av. Common Tls. 780-85 which has considerably reduced stock lots in these qualities.

Steam Filatures have in fair demand and while prices continue mixed, purchases show some advance from bottom rates. The chief interest has been in Medium grades. Lyons however, seems disinclined at present to further business at the advance asked.

Yellow Steam Filatures. Quite a good business has been done both in Mienchows and Shantungs and market is considerably firmer with higher prices required. Purchases include.

Advocates Support For Federal Reserve Banks

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Discontent with the Federal Reserve system on the part of many small bankers throughout the country which has made itself manifest in conversations at the convention of the American Bankers' Association brought forth sharp condemnation today in the address of John D. Phillips, president of the state bank division of the American Bankers' Association, and to a certain extent brought the question out into the open, although it is not expected that any discussion of the various aspects of the situation will be brought out on the floor of the convention.

There was no direct mention of the bankers themselves in the speech of Mr. Phillips, but the fact that there was a dissenting note among the bankers was brought out in the tabulation of replies to a series of questionnaires sent out to various bankers throughout the country. Two questions were asked: First, "Do you believe that the Federal Reserve system has been beneficial to the agricultural, commercial and banking interests of the country and that it should be perpetuated; second, if your not being a member should contribute to the destruction of the Federal Reserve system, would you join?"

On the first question the dissenters were not strong, for 4,024 voted yes and 477 voted no. On the second question, however, there were 725 banks which voted no, or, in other words, that they were willing to see the Reserve system wrecked rather than join. There were 2,876 banks which voted in the affirmative, therefore, that they would join rather than see the system suffer.

CAUSES OF DISCONTENT

In part the dissatisfaction of the small bankers with the Reserve system is said to lie in the par collection of checks established by the Reserve system, which costs the small bankers the exchange which they formerly collected. Furthermore there is a loss of interest on the reserve held by the Reserve banks, and it is held that there has been too much in the nature of arbitrary handling of the reserve system.

Mr. Phillips was strong in his approval of the Federal Reserve system, saying that in his opinion "it is the best piece of financial legislation ever placed on the statute books of any nation in the world."

Walter Head, president of the association, in formally opening the first session of the convention, struck hard at all kinds of radicalism, opposed government ownership of the railroads and all great industries, urged bankers to combat all efforts to give Congress the right to override decisions of the Supreme Court, and contended that the agricultural crisis was economic and that the remedy lay in the application of sound economic principles rather than in the pursuit of political panaceas. He declared that the taxation was more than a problem; that it was a threat of impending disaster and deplored the burden of restrictive laws and administrative regulations.

TOO MUCH GOVERNMENT

"Despite the general recognition of the overwhelming burden of government," said Mr. Head, "we find ourselves constantly waging a defensive battle against plans and programs which would transfer still greater duties to government, which would hamper individual initiative still further, which will, if put into practice, crush individual ambition and destroy individual opportunity."

E. T. Meredith, former Secretary of Agriculture, urged upon the convention the need of a better realisation on the part of business men that agriculture is absolutely controlling in all business. He called for continued tax exemption for farm loan bonds and a larger appropriation for the Department of Agriculture.

The convention received the reports made to the executive council formally approving the proposal to float half the $200,000,000 German loan in this country and recommending that American bankers have nothing to do with the financing of Russia so long as the present Soviet government remains in power.

The old question which racked the convention of last year, that of branch banking, once again raised its head when Francis M. Savage, president of the Northwest Savings Bank of Washington, tried to get a resolution dealing with this subject before the convention, but was ruled out of order. The subject, however, was dealt with at some length by Mr. Phillips, who said that, while disapproving heartily of branch banking, he favored the enactment of the McFadden-Pepper bill, as amended by the Hull amendment, in order to equalize conditions of competition between state and national banks.

COOLIDGE'S MESSAGE

President Coolidge in a letter to Mr. Head vigorously upheld the Federal Reserve system. His letter follows:

"My dear Mr. Head: You have been kind enough to ask me for a brief message to the American Bankers' Association at the time of its forthcoming annual convention. I am glad to comply because of my strong feeling that the bankers of the country deserve a generous recognition of their services. There will, I think, be general agreement that the attitude of the public toward the bankers, and likewise that of the bankers toward the public, have both become more sympathetic and appreciative in recent years.

"We may attribute this in no small measure to the extension of interest in economic and financial problems in recent years. It is in part a consequence of the increasing insistence of these problems and in part, also, a result of the establishment of the Federal reserve system. Even so great a calamity as the war has had some good consequences, and among these we must include a greatly increased attention to matters that are fundamental to the life of the community. It is not so many years since banking was a good deal of a mystery, even to the majority of business men. Nowadays, thank to the policy of leading banks in taking the public into their confidence and discusisng their problems in simple and understandable fashion, the mystery has largely disappeared. In its place have come confidence and understanding, which make for the best interests of both the bank and its customers.

"One incident to this new attitude is the general appreciation of the Federal Reserve System's usefulness. It has demonstrated itself as the stabilizing and unifying factor of our monetary and financial structure, during a period which, without it, would certainly have been marked by distress and disasters. Instead of these, we have seen our monetary system accepted as the world's standard. We have been able to place every reliance in the soundness of our banks and their ability to adapt themselves to the most extraordinary requirements.

"Our financial establishment assumes from year to year a constantly large part and significance in the realm of international busines and financing. This is an inevitable result of conditions which have placed in our hands so great a control over the world's reserves of credit and monetary capacity. Welded with the same wisdom are care in the future as heretofore, these forces will contribute powerfully to the rehabilitation of money systems, of credit and of business throughout the world. They will do this, moreover, to the advantage both of our own country and of others.

"I feel, therefore, that in extending my good wishes and confidence to the great banking interests of America I am also expressing a generous and helpful purpose toward the concerns of sound business everywhere. There are multiplied evidences of improving conditions throughout the business structures of the world. American leadership faith and ready helpfulness have contributed largely to bringing about this improved outlook. So it is fitting to extend congratulations to your American bankers upon your achievements of the past and likewise upon the bright prospect that opens before you. Very truly yours,

"CALVIN COOLIDGE."

American Exports To Asia Show Great Increase

Increasing Trade In Tinplate, Refined Copper And Other Products

Sales of United States merchandise to the Orient are showing remarkable gains especially when compared with those to other parts of the world. Exports from the United States to Asia and Oceania in the 8 months ending with February 1924, the latest available record, show an increase of about 44 percent over the same period of last year, while those to the remainder of the world show a gain of but about 7 percent in the like period. The share which exports to Asia and Oceania form of the total exports for the 8 months ending with February 1924 is 17.1 percent against 13, 4 percent in the same period of last year, 12.7 percent in the calendar year 1920, 9.8 percent in the closing year of the war, and 7.9 percent in the year immediately preceding the war. The total value of the exports to Asia and Oceania in the fiscal year ending with June 30, 1324 seems likely to exceed $700,000,000, as against slightly less than $200,000,000 in the fiscal year 1914, all of which preceded the opening of the war. In the 8 months ending with February the total to Asia and Oceania is $512,000,000 against only $356,000,000 in the same month of last year.

This big gain in America exports to the Orient, says the Trade Record of The National City Bank of New York, is the more interesting by reason of the fact that manufactures form a very large percentage of our exports to that part of the world. In the latest year for which exact details on this point are available manufactures formed over 75 percent of our exports to Asia and Oceania, and the big gains in our 1924 sales to that section of the world indicates that manufactures are holding their own in the post war competition with those produced in the other parts of the manufacturing world.

And this big increase in American present exports to the Orient while due in some degree to the abnormal demands of Japan which followed the earthquake are by no means confined to that country. In fact increases occurred in our sales to practically all of the important countries of both Asia and Oceania. The value of the exports to China, India, the Dutch East Indies, Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippine Islands, Kwangtung, the Far Eastern Republic, and Asiatic Russia show in each case larger totals in the 8 months ending with February 1924 than in the same period of the preceding year.

Details as to the articles in which this increase occurs confirm the suggestion that the growth occurs chiefly in manufactures. The number of passenger automobiles sent to the 8 countries of Asia and Oceania for which 1924 figures are available, China, Japan, India, Australia, New Zealand, the Dutch East Indies, the Philippine Islands, and Palestine, show a total for the 8 months ending with February of this year of 34,568 machines against 14,620 in the like period of the preceding year, and of commercial automobiles over 8,000 against about 2,000 in the 1923 period. Exports of automobiles of all sorts to Asia and Oceania in the 8 months of the current fiscal year increased approximately 156 percent over the same period of last year, while those to all other parts of the world increased but 44 percent. Tin plate is another illustration of the growing demand of the Orient for our manufactures. The quantity of tin plate exported to India in the 8 months of this fiscal year is 23,000,000 pounds, against less than 1,000,000 in the same months of last year, to China 39,000,000 against less than 2,000,000, to Hongkong, the gateway to southern China, 10,000,000 against less than a half million in the same months of last year. Of refined copper the quantity sent to China is 35,000,000 pounds against 14,000,000. Of printing presses the number to Australia and New Zealand doubled. Of flour the quantity sent to China more than doubled. Gasoline, fuel oil and lubricating oil also show increases in movements to the Orient and in auto tires the number exported to Asia and of all to the show cent. Oceania shows an increase out 10 percent while those other parts of the world a decline of nearly 40 per-

FAIRS IN SWEDEN ARE CONSIDERED SATISFACTORY

Gothenburg And Malmo Exhibitions Will Be Held In Spring And Fall

For a number of years Sweden has had two fairs, the Gothenburg Fair and the Malmo Fair, of which the former is the largest and oldest. This year both fairs were held at the same time owing to various local circumstances, and the natural result has been that a wish has arisen for measures which can prevent such competition in the future, as in numerous quarters it is thought that Sweden has plenty of room for both fairs. Efforts in this direction have also been crowned by success recently. It has now been decided that next year, and no doubt also in the future, the Gothenburg Fair will be a Spring Fair (from May 4—10 1925) while the Malmo Fair is to be held at the same time as in the four previous years, from August 3rd to August 9th. This arrangement has become possible because the Gothenburg Fair has now the permanent exhibition buildings, built for the Jubilee Exhibition last year at its disposal.

THIS YEAR'S FAIR CONCLUDED

Both fairs for the current year have now been concluded and there has been good participation both from buyers and exhibitors even though the Gothenburg Fair, the seventh of its kind, naturally paled somewhat in comparison with last year's exhibition which was, after all, on a totally different scale. This year a number of transactions have been concluded, some of them very considerable ones, and in most instances the results have produced great satisfaction.

At the Gothenburg Fair a total of 22,000 buyer's cards and 6,000 visitor's cards were issued. The Fair was divided into 8 groups representing products from a large number of leading Swedish industries. Furthermore, the General Swedish Export Association, the Federation of Swedish Industries, the Swedish Merchants' Union and the Swedish Craftmans' Union had special exhibitions at the Fair.

The radio exhibition which had been arranged in connection with the Fair attracted special attention. It had about 50 exhibitors and represented everything that could be of interest in the way of radio technique up to the present day.

The Malmo Fair had 291 exhibitors representing about 500 different undertakings. A total of 13,000 buyer's cards were issued 550 of which went to foreign participants.

According to the quantity statistics, the foreign trade in July shows a decrease in comparison with the previous month. This is true of both the import and the export. The index figures of the Board of Trade (based on the foreign trade figures in 1913) are 95 per cent for the export and 137 for the import as against respectively 108 and 141 in June. To all appearances, however, the month has nevertheless resulted in a favorable trade balance with an export surplus of several million kronor:—in June it was 18 millions.

EXPORTS MAINTAIN GOOD LEVEL

The export has maintained a satisfactory level and in respect to the standard products shows, on the whole, considerably better figures than during the same month last year. This is, for example, the case in the export of sawn timber which amounted to 532,000 cub. metera as against 439,000 in July 1923. A still greater increase is to be observed in the paper-pulp 107,000 tons. Paper likewise shows higher figures. The quality industries have also had a good sales market.

The export of ball-bearings has thus amounted to 1.24 millions as compared with 0.77 millions in the same month last year. A similar increase is shown by the locomotive industry which in July had an export with a value of no less than 7.27 million kr. as against only a few thousand kronor last year. Agricultural machines and separators also exhibit a much improved position with an export value of respectively 2.22 and 1.73 millions.

On the import side attention is attracted by the corn import which has gradually grown very considerable, amounting in July this year to 33,700 tons or about 11,000 tons more than in the same month last year. The cotton import was, it is true, somewhat smaller in July but if the past seven year period be regarded as a whole, the import figures are nevertheless greater than in 1923. In comparison with last year there is, for example, an increase in wool, copper, oil cakes, hides, coal and coke.

As far as coal is concerned there is a considerable difference between the import in July this year and in 1923, it having amounted to respectively 465,000 and 269,000 tons and, for coke, to 57,000 and 38,000.

What Is A Traitor In China?

MANY of the foreign newspapers in China are now joining in the anvil-chorus and condemning General Feng Yu-hsiang and his associate Dr. C. T. Wang, who occupies the post of Foreign Minister in the new government which has been set up in Peking following the coup of the Christian General a few days ago. Feng is a "traitor" and Wang is an "adventurer" to use the milder terms which are being employed. Large and copious tears are being shed for the "unfortunate" President Tsao Kun who was forced to relinquish a post which is popularly reported to have cost him five or six million dollars a few months previously. "Poor" Wu Pei-fu, whose single-track mind could envisage nothing except a unification of China by means of the sword, is also coming in for his share of tears and sympathy at the turn of events.

Thus do we have further curious exhibitions of "neutrality" on the part of certain newspapers in China the policies of which are diametrically opposed to the announced policies of the Powers. And in the midst of this we would like to have someone define terms "traitor" and "adventurer" and apply the definitions to present-day Chinese politics. Since there is no Central Government in the land and coalitions and counter coalitions are being made and unmade by the provincial military officials almost daily, how are we going to say that this man is a "traitor" and that man is an "adventurer?" Wong and Chung and Ching and Fung form a coalition for a certain purpose and then either before or after they have started to carry out their scheme, Chung pulls out and spoils the picture. Outsiders who occupied the position of friendly spectators or who stood to gain through the Wong-Chung-Ching-Fung combination naturally are disappointed when one of the conspirators pulls out and spoils the scheme—and the expected profits. Then we have the cry of "traitor" when the only thing which has occurred has been that one Chinese official for certain reasons of his own decided to change his mind.

In this connection it might be of interest to define the word, "traitor." Webster's Dictionary says in part that a traitor is "One who violates his allegiance and betrays his country; one, who, in breach of trust, delivers his country to an enemy, or yields up any fort or place entrusted to his defense, or surrenders an army or body of troops to the enemy unless when vanquished; also, one who takes arms and levies war against, or one who aids an enemy to conquer, his country."

It is only by a far stretch of the imagination that General Feng Yu-hsiang can be accused of being a traitor. The Powers are pursuing, or at least trying to pursue a neutral policy toward China. This applies to all of the nations having treaty relations with China with the possible exception of Soviet Russia, which rightly may be accused of meddling. General Feng has not sold out his country to an enemy nation: the only thing he has done has been to follow an independent course in a free field, where everybody else was doing exactly the same thing. He may be accused of "double-crossing" his superiors, General Wu Pei-fu and Tsao Kun, but on the other hand he never did approve of their policies and both of them knew it well. They have repeatedly tried to "shelve" him as well as his associate General Yen Hsi-shan, the governor of the so-called model Province of Shansi. Being unable to change the course of General Wu's single-track policy of conquering China at the point of the bayonet, by argument, they waited their opportunity and used other methods—and succeeded—temporarily at least.

It is apparent that General Feng has no greater liking for Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian warlord than he had for General Wu Pei-fu, but the threatened alliance in the Yangtsze Valley against him naturally forces the Christian General and his associates at Peking to cooperate with Mukden. An alliance on one side always forces a counter-alliance on the other and often makes strange bed fellows—in China—as well as in other lands. What could be more incongruous than Chang Tso-lin the Manchurian military baron working with Sun Yat-sen, the Southern radical and democrat? But they get together nevertheless in the face of the common danger. In Great Britain the Liberals and Conservatives got together against the Labor-Socialists. It happens everywhere and it is bound to happen in China if the Yangtsze barons persist in their plans to drive Feng out of Peking.

And still another word about the tears which are being wasted on the "Boy" Emperor, who has been living a pampered life in the Palace in Peking. When China became a Republic this farce should have been ended at that time but the forces which desired a monarchy—forces not all Chinese by any means—were too strong for the republicans and the infant emperor was saved—for a purpose—we can depend upon that. But whose business is it but China's if a certain group in control of the Capital desire to do away with him? Why all these tears? Are these foreign well-wishers of the young descendent of the Manchus broken-hearted because the young man's education has been interrupted? Rot, is the word which should be applied to all of this mollycoddle sentiment!

In making these remarks we are not defending the present regime in Peking, nor attempting to apologise for the sensational actions of General Feng Yu-hsiang of Dr. C. T. Wang. From the present trend of events in Peking, it would appear that Japanese and Soviet Russian influence is to be paramount and of this we doubtless will have much to say in the future. But the point we desire to make is that merely because something happens in China's internal political situation which we do not like, is no indication that it is wrong, or that the individuals responsible for it are "traitors" or "adventurers."

The difficulty with the situation in China from the standpoint of foreign opinion, is that we all look at China in terms of our own private interests and friendships. The writer of these lines, for instance, has always entertained a high admiration for Mr. Gow Enhung, Governor of Tsingtao, who has always done his job faithfully wherever he has been placed and often under adverse circumstances. He was in the way of doing great things at Tsingtao and had he been given a few years of peace and uninterruption on the part of the militarists, he undoubtedly would have performed wonders in the development of that port. But politics shifted and Gow is now under arrest. Naturally there is sympathy for him and resentment toward those who brought about his downfall, but after all it's China's business and not ours.

If foreigners will bear in mind the vital fact that less than three years ago the leading Powers of the world entered into certain agreements at Washington to the general effect that China is an independent nation and that her territorial, administrative and political integrity are not to be infringed upon, it will help a great deal in clarifying the general outlook on the China situation. And until the Powers get together again and change their policy, the Washington idea still stands!

A Chance For A Definite Policy

THE results of the recent elections in the United States and Great Britain have given rise to all manner of speculation as to the development of the respective policies of the governments of these two countries in view of the fact that they both have before them the prospect of four years of uninterrupted work. Certainly so far as Great Britain is concerned it is to be expected that the weaknesses of its foreign policy which have resulted from the governmental instability which has marked the last few years, may be remedied. Especially is this the case with regard to the adoption of schemes fostered by the Conservative Governments of Mr. Bonar Law and Mr. Baldwin for the purpose of strengthening the commercial ties between the different parts of the British Empire, and the provision of adequate defence for the same. How far the Conservative government will go towards restoring the situation to an approximation of what it was prior to the accession of Mr. Macdonald to power, is yet to be seen, but it would seem apparent on the face of it that unless Mr. Baldwin continues practically where he left off, he will, to no little degree disappoint expectations. For example, though he may not care to embark on any substantial tariff reform program, on which he received the verdict of the electors only about a year ago, he will undoubtedly go further in the matter of giving Colonial Preference where possible, and, perhaps, reinstate the mildly protective measures such as those in the McKenna duties, and those others provided by the Safeguarding of Industries Act. We may even see either the abolition of the dole system, that iniquitous measure which by its abuse has probably tended more towards unemployment than has the existence of commercial depression, or its modification along lines calculated to give some of the workers a greater incentive to earn money for themselves.

But those are domestic aspects, which, while they are of some interest to us in the Far East, do not rival in any degree of importance the possibilities apparent in the Far East. With the American and British governments somewhat similar in their political nature, with somewhat similar aims in the Far East, and a security of tenure of office which should enable things to be done, there seems to be good reason to believe that a stronger policy in the Orient will be evolved by both governments. So far as British naval requirements are concerned, there is reason to believe that the Singapore base scheme may be taken up again and pushed through. As a purely defensive measure the scheme has already been too long delayed, for it is obvious that present day naval requirements, necessitate the creation of a first class naval base at the junction of some of the most important British trade routes in this part of the world. For while it may be true that at the present moment there is no threat existing against these routes, there is no guarantee that should would not arise in the future.

In China too, we believe we are entitled to expect the development of a firmer policy, by both the American and British governments than has hitherto been the case. Exactly along what lines such a policy should be moulded is not at present easy to foresee, but there is not the slightest doubt that the present state of affairs cannot continue for long without doing considerable harm to the prestige of both nations. There is no intention of suggesting anything in the nature of intervention in China. It is believed that such a step would be particularly ill-advised and, possibly, fraught with the gravest possible harm to the interests of both countries in China. At the same time, however, no really friendly nation can complacently sit by and watch this country torn asunder by the personal ambitions of a few, whose interests are diametrically opposed to the satisfactory development of a sound government for China. Nor can these nations continue to remain supine under the present impossible treaty situation. In these are to be found the most serious factors tending towards the diminution of foreign prestige in China, and unity between the two governments in this respect, with a common determination to see that obligations are duly and punctually observed would do more to reinstate our nationals in the place they originally had, and never should have lost, will be one of the best things that could happen to any of the three countries we have in mind.

Other Views Than Ours On The War In China

GETTING WAR ALL WET

(The Journal, Madison, Wis.)

Every day one lives he learns something. Tuesday's little lesson in the news was the discovery that in China it is regarded as bad form or unlucky, or something, to fight a battle in the rain. When it clouds up, it seems, the rival commander issue rain checks and blow the quitting whistle and the soldiers hunt cover.

It sounds odd, perhaps, especially to former members of the A. E. F. whose chief impression of "Sunny France" is a sea of mud with dripping clouds apparently so low-down you could puncture them with a bayonet. But it has its points, as anyone can see. For instance, it must greatly decrease the fatality of war if for no other reason than that it insures less fighting in a given time. For another, it must make it easier for an officer who loves to see his outfit looking "smart and soldierly"—for slogging around in the rain and mud does raise havoc with the parade-ground polish. And no doubt it makes for better morale among the men, who probably enjoy being killed much more on a nice, bright day when the sun is cheerfully shining.

All around, the Chinese idea is such a happy contrivance it seems as if it should be suggested to the League of Nations commission which is trying to find a way to reduce the dangers of war. If the notion of a truce while it rains can be incorporated into the laws of war a great step forward will be taken. Later it can be made a misdemeanor to fight on moonlight nights, and so on by easy stages until war is practically abolished because of adverse weather conditions. No doubt that will be an easier road to the desired goal than persuading the nations to scrap their guns and navies and take a chance on the good behavior of neighbors who don't give a hang about the weather.

The idea also furnishes a suggestion whereby the powers may be able to halt the spread of civil war in China without the dangers and difficulties incident to intervention. Let them merely engage the famous Hatfield brothers, who have acquired such a great reputation as sure-fire rainmakers. On the past performance the Hatfield boys should be able to deliver a continuous downpour for as long as necessary to cool off the warlike spirits of the Wus and Lus and Changs and Hos. That would be much cheaper than intervention, and it would seem to incur no unpleasant political consequences.

USED STAMPS FOR CHARITY

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS:

Sir,—In your Sunday's issue there appears a letter from a Mr. John Recano, of London, appealing for used postage stamps for charity.

Do you know anything about this gentleman? Or the names of the Charities benefited by him? Has he sent to you a copy of his Balance Sheet or other financial Statement? Does he work unaided and without supervision or does he give you the names of the persons composing his Committee?

If not, don't you think you ought to make some inquiry before you possibly let your readers in for something they might not like?

An almost fascimile letter from the same gentleman appeared in your senior morning contemporary some months ago, and on the face of it I personally have no intention of swallowing all he says.

THE COUP D'ETAT AT PEKING

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir:—The writer has watched the coup d'etat at Peking with great interest and therefore has written a short account about his personal experiences and opinion regarding the movement as follows, which may be of some help in suggesting to those who care to work for the welfare of the people and the Republic of China as well:

Early in the morning of the 23rd instant, the writer took a ricksha and went as far as some 500 yards from the Tung Ssu Pai Lou, he was prevented from going on by some soldiers. Thinking that something had happened, he told the ricksha coolie to take him in a zigzag way by crossing a number of hutungs with the hope that he might be able to get to his destination. But to his disappointment, he was stopped again outside an entrace of a hutung at Wang Fu Ching Ta Chien or Morrison Street where he tried to find out the matter through telephones which he was surprised to find unworkable. Incidently he went to the Chinese Telegraph Administration to send a telegram. But as soon as he reached the gateway thereof, he was questioned by one of the four soldiers guarding there, "What do you want to do?" He answered, "I want to have a telegram sent." The soldier continued, "Go back; the telegraph service is interrupted." Therefore his curiosity was greatly aroused as to what had happened.

Subsequently, a friend told the writer that General Feng Yu-hsiang returned to Peking with his troops and requested the President to issue a Mandate to stop the civil war at Shanhaikwan, in order to talk peace and save the unnecessary shed of blood. The writer certainly rejoiced in hearing of this.

Nevertheless, according to reports of the past few days, the loving tenderness of the Christian General for the suffering soldiers and the people not only secured a Mandate to stop fighting but also occasioned the abolition of all of Marshal Wu Pei-fu's offices and ranks. Furthermore, it led to the overthrow of the Cabinet and the imminent resignation of President Tsao Kun whose ambition to have become the Executive of the Republic of China is, undoubtedly, the cause of the Chihli-Fengtien wars, and an obstacle to the unification of China.

However, to unite China by force is the policy of Marshal Wu Pei-fu who is, no doubt, a good man, but his ever success in military engagements during the past years has made him imperial in spirit, listening to no advice of his friends, so the report goes. His bitterest enemy is Marshal Chang Tso-lin who has never forgot the defeat at his hand during the first Chihli-Fengtien War. But by this second Chihli-Fengtien War Marshal Chang seems to have an opportunity to square his accounts with Marshal Wu. At this juncture, the unexpected happened: General Li Ching-lin, if the report is true, returned to Mukden to have taken the same drastic action as did General Feng Yu-hsiang at Peking.

According to to-day's report, Marshal Wu has already arrived at Tientsin with 3,000 soldiers. Another report goes so far as to say that he has informed the Diplomatic Corps that he has been entrusted with the power of the President to call forth 100,000 soldiers who will arrive at Peking in the course of a few days. If this proves true, then instead of peace, fighting will soon take place between Peking and Tientsin.

Now how to keep fighting from taking place or being continued as well as how to save the country from destruction is a question for the people no less than Marshal Wu himself and his fellow-generals of the other provinces of China to decide. As the writer is a lover of peace, he wishes the following to be given due consideration by Marshals, Tuchuns, Generals and citizens of the Republic of China:

(1) Marshal Wu will go down in China's history as a true great and strong man and a real lover for the unification of China, if he sees fit to receive such a seeming humiliation as is the depriving of his ranks, etc., and to lead his troops to Ching Hai for reclamation purposes.

(2) The Tuchuns and Generals of the provinces should have their eyes upon the people and the country instead of upon friendship and intimate relations with any leader, by keeping their troops at their own posts.

(3) True citizens and lovers of the Republic of China should take this opportunity to step forward to assist in the unification of the country by losing no time to urge the various party leaders to come at once to Peking or Tientsin for a reund table conference, so as to discuss and decide the question of China's fundamental policy for everlasting peace and government.

A LOVER OF PEACE.

Sharp curves meant not a thing to him,
He gave no heed to warning signs;
The figures on his plate were dim,
He often busted through the lines.

He crowded others off the road,
The way he went was strewn with wrecks;
His teeth protruded, and he showed
No wish to keep from breaking necks.

He passed a graveyard now and then,
But learned no lesson from the stones.
And very often other men
Addressed him in no friendly tones.

A Locomotive's toot was heard,
The crossing was ahead somewhere;
Still rushing on, the reckless bird
Seemed bound to beat the choo-choo there.

They found him where the weeds were tall,
His battered car was cut in two;
He will not cast a vote this Fall,
But I don't care a hang, do you?

He smashed a chicken very flat,
He knocked an Airedale through a fence,
And demonstrated clearly that
He lacked the thing called common sense.

DRESS

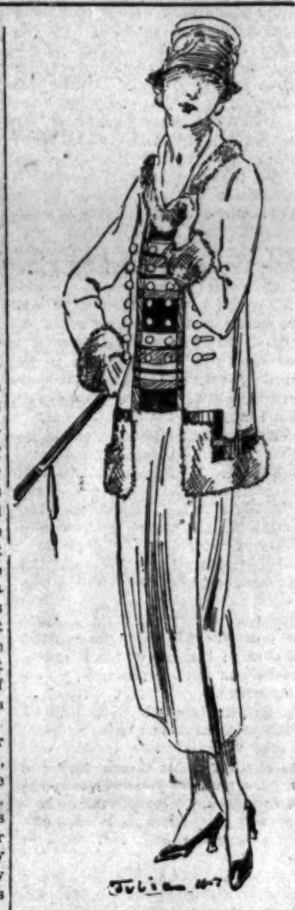
By Mary Marshall

The Suit That Isn't a Suit Gains Attention.

It looks like a suit, but it isn't. It isn't even an ensemble costume in the usual use of the words. And it's a very useful and appropriate sort of costume, so long as some obtuse friend does not actually insist on your removing your jacket. Of course anyone in the know realizes at once that it is a jacket only in effect.

The sketch shows a costume of this sort of dark blue cloth trimmed with beaver, with a plaid waistcoat and trimming bands. There are other models with a long coat section that may be opened and thrown back, revealign the frock beneath, most of them trimmed with fur. After all, the occasions when one does remove the jacket of a formal street suit are rare indeed. The feeling has grown up that it wasn't quite good form to remove the jacket for luncheon or tea or church, or any of the places where a costume of this sort would be most appropriate. The advantage to be gained is that the all-in-one-piece costume of this sort easier to put on less bulky, and sometimes trimmer.

On the suit sketched beaver was the fur chosen—beaver, which is regarded as one of the conservative, more expensive furs. Many of the suits and costumes of the season show the newer fur trimmings which have recently been devised in France. They have been doing things to furs over there in an amazing manner. Have you seen the new so-called "panama mink," much used for trimming by Bechoff? It is, of course, muskrat to begin with, but it is very cleverly treated by the furrier. Thebaut has produced "isun d'Hudson"—Hudson muskrat—in which the old standby muskrat is treated in a curious manner, marked like mink. Chinchilla effects are much liked for trimming, and French furriers have done all sorts of things to rat and rabbit pelts to give them the chinchilla look. And some of these treated furs, bearing the cachet of some of the leading furriers and designers of the world, take on a smartness all their own. The women who wear them don't want to fool anyone—the furs as they are are attractive enough.



Dark blue cloth frock trimmed with beaver and plaid. It has the appearance of a coat suit, but in reality the jacket is attached to the rest of the frock.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

WEREN'T THEY QUEER?

The musician Handel used to order dinner for three, when traveling, and then eat up everything himself. Or, if he was particularly hungry, he would order dinner for six—and eat all six meals himself.

ARE YOU A DRESS DABBER?

When you get a new frock from the dressmaker or dress shop, what do you do with it? Do you hang it in your wardrobe until such time as you want to wear it and then wear it as it is, or do you, as soon as you get it home, try it on and then start in doing things to it? It seems too tight across the back of the skirt, so you contrive to introduce a little extra fullness under one of the side panels, little dreaming that you have thereby destroyed the line so highly esteemed by the designer. You decide that the bodice is too plain, so you introduce a few artificial flowers and put some metal lace in the armholes. Of course it's the fashion to have perfectly plain bodices, still it looks bare!

It seems such a harmless diversion, and after a while you get so that you simply can't let new frocks or new hats alone. You boast of your habit of fixing up your new things, perhaps thinking that it shows an artstic talent, or a strong streak of originality. But do you know what the designers and dressmakers think?

Recently a very well-known dressmaker abroad took a definite stand against these dress dabbers. He said that hereafter his frocks might be bought only by women who would wear them without mutilating them. It did him harm and caused him personal anguish to have frocks bearing his name appear so distorted.

So it happens that the best dressed women are sometimes the women who have the last knack about dressmaking themselves. They coudn't change a dress if they wanted to. They wouldn't think of removing one bit of trimming or taking out a single stitch, because they would know well enough that if they did they would never get it on again. It is the over-confident ones who are the real dress dabbers.

Bee-Flight And Man-Flight

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

Not long ago, while strolling in a meadow, I saw a big-bodied bumble-bee rise from a flower, on its humming little wings, and sail off in a swift curve to another islet of wild flowers, which drew the winged freebooter like an Eldorado in the green grass sea.

And as I watched I wondered. It struck me with sudden amazement to see so relatively huge a bulk driven by sails so tiny! Have you ever noticed how massive a bumble-bee is, and how small its wings? Comparatively, they are not as large as those whose graceful tips rise from the shoulders of carved angels in European cathedrals. And I thought, indeed, that it might have been familiarity with such humble creaures as the bumble-bee that induced the cathedral sculptors to deem it possible for angels burdened with human bodies to perform similar miracles of flight.

Then, as I listened to the musical hum of the bee's wings—for I was as eager as ever Emerson could have been to keep near him—I reflected that speed of vibration was the secret of his wonderful wing power. I don't know how many vibrations per second those wings make, and perhaps no entomologist knows, they certainly move so fast that they cannot be seen, except by flashes of reflected light; but that does not in itself, imply a very great velocity, because even the blades of an aeroplane virtually disappear, and the human eye is unable to separate successive movements that recur at a rate exceeding, say, sixteen to the second. But, anyhow, the bumble-beee vibrates its puny wings so fast that the velocity compensates the lack of size. In so doing it achieves, by its little physicological motor, what the most powerful engine of human contrivance has not yet been able to do. When man, with the aid of similarly small mechanisms can lift himself up into the air, and circle about there with almost projectile speed, and with absolute safety and certainty, then he will have rivaled the bumble bee.

Our airships rather imitate the soaring birds. They get off the ground, so to speak, by rising on an atmospheric slope. The bee, too, may to an unknown extent, depends upon a similar principle, but evidently, from the bulk of his body, he is not well constructed for aeroplaning, and he must, considered as a flying machine, rather resemble the helicopter, or other apparatus designed to rise more or less vertically from the ground. But his muscular mechanism, and his unconscious control must be of marvelous efficiency, for notwithstanding his large bulk, and the smallness of his driving apparatus, he sometimes shoots through the air with a speed recalling that of a bullet. In all these respects, it is true, many other insects simulate the bee, but he seems more miraculously endowed, for, with him, the contrast between size of body and parvitude of wings tends to an extreme.

One might suspect that there is a constant of muscular strength, as of gravitation, among all living creatures. Strength being proportional to the cross-section of the muscles, and weight to the volume, the smaller creature possesses relatively greater strength than the larger one. Man is not strong enough either to vibrate small wings with sufficient velocity to lift him, nor to move large wings against atmospheric resistance. His problem is to achieve by the aid of his intelligence and his increasing mastery over natural forces, mechanical feats which by his bodily strength alone he cannot perform. It may be that we already possess motors [illegible] as far as power is concerned enable a man to fly with artificial wings; but we do not yet possess sufficient knowledge of the working of wings to be able to produce efficient imitations of them for human use. It required thousands of years of [illegible] to tell man at which end of the problem of flight he should begin. If tradition may be trusted, his first efforts were to imitate the common birds and the insects which fly mainly by agitating wings. At last the science of mechanical physics taught him that his only hope of success lay in trying to imitate the soaring birds; instead of a bob-o-link or a lark, he must become a gull, or an eagle. Having succeded in this first step, it remains to consider whether he has any reasonable hope for success along the other line. He can soar, with his aeroplanes, like a dragon-fly; can he ever rise and dart about like a bee or a fly?

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

A Reckless driver drove one day
Where many people had to pass;
He headed down the crowded way
And gaily stepped upon the gas.

He butted in and blundered out,
And scraped a fender here and there;
He heeded no one's warning shout,
But ripped ahead and didn't care.

Arbitration Is Herriot's Policy Champion Declares

Paris, Nov. 10.—M. Rodez replaying to the criticism on the part of the opposition of M. Herriot emphasised that France in signing the Geneva protocol showed herself to be a really peaceful Power, and that France made distinct endeavors to prevent a new war without jeopardising her own security.

"We have made the principle of arbitration to prevail," continued the speaker, "and have decided to cease ignoring the Russian people. We resume equitable and honorable relations with Germany, and we ask for nothing else but to co-operate with the Allies whatever government they may have."

In conclusion M. Rodez said that the Premier, M. Herriot, insisted that it was a matter of vital necessity to balance the budget, and the aim of the present loan was to liquidate arrears.

RADIOPHONE TEST CONDUCTED BY RADIO ENGINEER

Shanghai Talks To Ningpo On Ten Watts Power

Mr. George T. W. Fong, noted radio research engineer, also known as "The Father of Broadcasting in China" has recently conducted a radiophone test between Shanghai and Ningpo. Mr. Fong sailed for Ningpo on 5th on the steamer Hsin Ningshao, on which radio sets were first installed.

He kept in touch with Shanghai by radiphone on the way. Both music and speech were received very distinctly and clearly and officers and passengers on board were surprised at the result. Mr. Fong began to transmit power on 100 watts only and then gradually decreased it to ten watts, yet at 6:15 on 6th when the steamer was anchored at Ningpo wharf, he could still get in touch with Shanghai by radiophone. The experiment was repeated when he came back yesterday.

In this experiment Mr. Fong asserts that a great deal of valuable data which were of scientific interest were obtained, concerning radio transmission over sea and on board a ship. C. W. signals on very short waves were also tested on this experiment.

French Fire Unit Seeks More Members For Reserve Work

The foreign reserve of Le Torrent, the fire-fighting unit of the French Settlement, is seeking younger members.

The new unit was formally organised last Friday at a meeting at the French Club. The following are members:

Messrs. L. M. FF. Beytagh, W. S. Clay, D. H. Cooke, H. J. Faers, A. G. Mossop, G. E. Mayne, I. H. C. Godfrey, L. B. Stone, H. N. Weinberg, J. H. Underwood, B. C. Haila, E. A. Jenkinson, P. A. Macdougal, H. A. Atkinson, W. H. Spencer, R. Grimshaw, F. O. Wolf, S. A. Brodtkorb, J. E. R. Harris, J. B. Wishart, E. S. Thellefsen, C. C. Nyver.

Chairman Beytagh urged those present to do everything possible to augment the number of young men in the Reserve as it was the desire of the ex-Firemen of the old Brigade to gradually retire from active participation as soon as sufficient numbers of juniors had been trained up to a point when they would be capable of taking over entire charge. He also pointed out that eventually a certain number of the members would be provided with very comfortable quarters in the new station which is shortly to be built on the French Bund, and that they would find that the work would provide them with a very full measure of sport.

The French Council is providing new engines and gear of the most modern type which will considerably enhance the usefulness and efficiency of the Reserve.

Wang Chen-ping In Charge At Tientsin

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 4.—On learning of the departure of Marshal Wu Pei-fu yesterday, General Yang I-teh, Chief of the Tientsin Police, and General Li Yung-tien, Defence Commissioner of Tientsin, called upon Marshal Tuan Chi-jui and sought his advice as to what steps should be taken to deal with the military situation that had arisen there. Marshal Tuan suggested that General Wang Chen-ping should be invited to take command in Tientsin and that a special train should be requisitioned to bring him down from the capital. According to Chinese press reports, General Wang Chen-ping left here for Tientsin last night and has since taken over control of the 23rd Chihli Division, his old command.

The alarming reports that have been circulated regarding the situation at Tientsin do not seem to have caused much apprehension in official circles in Peking. For some time past, it was pointed out this morning, the foreign military commandants at Tientsin have been busy perfecting arrangements to deal with just such a crisis, while a considerable naval force of British, American, Japanese, French and Italian warships, has assembled there to deal with any emergency.

AIRSHIP FREES SPERRY PLANE WHILE ALOFT

Messenger, Hooked Beneath Dirigible, Shoots Away At Dayton Meet

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 3.—A new chapter was written in the story of aviation at Wilbur Wright Field today, when the TC-5, an army dirigible, piloted by Lieutenant Frank McKee of Scott Field, carried a diminutive Sperry messenger plane, flown by Lieutenant C. V. Finter of Langley Field, into the air and released it into immediate flight.

Gliding away from the "cloud port," Lieutenant Finter leisurely started his engine and the plane mounted into the skies. General Patrick, chief of the Air Service, and other officers emphasized the value of this manoeuvre in reconnoisance work, whereby planes could use a dirigible as a taking off and landing port.

While the landing manoeuvre was not illustrated, General Patrick said it had been successfully carried out at Air Service stations. The dirigible is equipped with a hook under the car which connects with a catch on the upper wing of the plane. Land planes, unequipped with pontoons, could utilize the dirigible at sea, it was pointed out.

Another achievement of the second day of the international airplane meet was to show that efficient flight was not necessarily predicated on large horse power. Five diminutive airplanes, wasplike in appearance as they encircled the field in a twenty-five mile race, proved that engines of less than twenty horse power are able to sustain a plane in safe as well as efficient flight. Engineers ascribed the remarkable performances of the tiny machine to the great progress that has been made in the field of aerodynamics during the last year and a half.

Three of the planes were equipped with eighteen horsepower motorcycle engines and two with twenty horsepower motors. Several aeronautical engineers who examined the planes and watched the race said that low horsepower meant low cost of operation. The builders of the planes entered were making it possible for the man of moderate income to own a plane, they said. The fuel consumption of each of the planes was less than one dollar during the race, it was announced.

Another point which was emphasized in connection with the "baby" planes was the low speed with which they were able to fly. One of the entrants encircled the course at the moderate speed of thirty-five miles an hour, his plane maintaining a height of 500 feet without difficulty.

The winner of the contest, which was for a trophy offered by The Dayton Daily News, was J. M. Johnson of Dayton in a Driggs-Johnson, which averaged 64.07 miles on the four laps. Johnson's plane, with a single underslung wing, was so small that he literally had to squeeze himself into place in the fuselage. Etienne Dormoy, whose product has been dubbed "the flying bathtub" by virtue of its appearance in the air, came in second with an average speed of 50.01 miles an hour. The other three planes did not finish. Lieutenant John A. Macready who with Lieutenant Oakley Kelly, made the first non-stop flight across the continent, participated in the race in a "baby" plane which he aided in building. He came down in the first lap because of a minor trouble.

Eighteen pilots contested for speed and efficiency in a race for the trophy offered by the aviation town and Country Club of Detroit. Charles F. Jones of Garden City, N. Y., was forced down in the last lap when he was leading his competitors by twelve miles at a speed of 120.05 miles an hour. Basil L. Stowe, in a Curtiss C was the victor, maintaining an average speed of 111.95 miles an hour. J. G. Ray, in a Curtiss Oriole, flying 107.05 miles an hour, and W. L. Stultz, whose Atlantic S-3, covered the 120-mile course at 106.9 miles, captured second and third places respectively.

Young America had its innings this morning when boys of ages ranging from twelve to eighteen years raced their handicraft in competition for the Mulvihill trophy. Two world records for model airplanes were established, one for duration of flight and the other for distance flown.

A model glider built by Robert V. Jaros, an eighteen-year-old student at the University of Chicago, representing the Model Aero Club of Illinois, won the trophy. The glider, equipped with two propellers set into motion by power from rubber bands, flew a distance of a mile and a half in ten minutes 14.2 seconds. The best built on record, made in England, was 5.5 minutes. There were twenty-five entrants in the contest, which brought youthful air enthusiasts from several distant cities.

Lieutenant D. M. Myers in the same Martin bomber, which took first place in the event last year, won the 150 miles race for the Dayton Chamber of Commerce cup. His time over the course was 109 miles an hour. Lieutenant C. P. Woolsey came in second with an average of 108 miles an hour and Lieutenant Hez McClellan arrived third at a speed four miles less. The seven planes in this race were all Martin bombers.

The 25,000 spectators were thrilled when Lieutenant Macready flew the second original Wright plane, constructed a short time after the Wright brothers made their first flight, at Kitty Hawk, N.C., in 1903. Seemingly flimsy and unsafe when compared with the modern aircraft, the "old-timer" showed that it was still manoeuvreable. A rather stiff breeze was blowing at the time, and Macready was congratulated, when he landed, for the skill he showed in flying the pioneer. Orville Wright, father of aviation and builder of the plane, was an interested spectator.

The world fliers, headed by Lieutenant Lowell Smith, arrived here late this afternoon to take part in the closing program tomorrow. Ezra Meeker pioneer in the day of the covered wagon, is speeding to Dayton by airplane over the route he covered to the Northwest by oxen. Meeyer, who is 94 years old, by expected to reach the field tomorrow morning.

AIR SERVICE WEAK, SAYS DAVIS

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. (Associated Press.)—The United States Army Air Service is "woefully weak" and far below "the safety point for national defense," Assistant Secretary Davis of the War Department said here tonight, speaking at the banquet of the international air meet.

"We should not enter into armament races with other nations," Mr. Davis continued, "that is not the American policy. We need sufficient planes for training and for the first shock of defense, sufficient pilots to man them and an efficient airplane industry to supply our wartime needs. Beyond that we should not go—less than this would court disaster.

"Our air force is below the minimum for security. Unless we are willing to gamble with fate, with our boys' lives as the stake, it must be increased. If we want a reasonable preparedness, we must be willing to pay a reasonable amount for it. Our best and cheapest investment for the national defense is aviation."

VETERANS WEAR UNIFORMS OF TWO WARS

When the Grand Army of the Republic held its annual encampment recently in Boston Henry M. Comey, vice-commander of the Civil War veterans, and Horace Wood, Boston veteran of the World War, were photographed together wearing the uniforms used by soldiers of the two conflicts. Even the rifles carried were included.

Declares Eskimo Wives Frequently Are Traded

Donald B. MacMillan, Arctic explorer, who, while he did not accompany Peary on his dash to the North Pole, was a member of that expedition, arrived in New York last month after fifteen months in North Greenland, frozen in the polar ice. He brought with him Eskimo dogs and Arctic rocks and flowers and told of growing vegetables in Winter on the deck of his ship, the Bowdoin, when within twelve degrees of the Pole.

While the long stay in the north was primarily for scientific purposes, Dr. MacMillan made a study of the natives of Smith Sound. In an interview at the Hotel Vanderbilt he pictured the Eskimos as living such communistic lives that the exchange of husbands and wives was a natural development, with the inevitable result that all became so closely related that a man might marry his own daughter without knowing she was his daughter. Yet he found them a healthy, virile race and could detect no trace of feebe mindedness.

"To the Eskimos," he said, "ourselves, our ship and our apparatus were as much of a curiosity as the circus is to a small boy, for we showed them moving pictures on a screen and by means of the radio conjured voices and music from the air. To them it was pure magic, and the word went far and wide and they came with their dog sleds for a hundred miles and more, over the ice and snow, to see these strange and, to them, unbelievable wonders.

SEALSKIN TENTS FOR SUMMER

"I think it is the popular belief that the natives of the arctic live all year round in snow igloos. This is not the case. In Summer, which lasts from May to September, most of the snow melts, and the Eskimos live in tents made of sealskin. In Winter their habitations are semi-subterranean rock igloos, lighted by windows made from the intestines of seal, heated by a small soapstone oil lamp, with moss for a wick, and with a hole in the floor and a hole in the roof for ventilation. Only when they are traveling do they use snow houses.

"As there are no laws of property and, indeed, no property except that each man has his hunting weapons and each woman her household pots, these stone houses are every one's property. Finding one empty an Eskimo family needing it takes it and it becomes theirs until they give it up and some one else takes it.

"They are polygamous and polyandrous. There is no ceremonial marriage or divorce. If one man has a daughter and another a son they agree that they shall marry. The young people have nothing to say about it. There is no courtship. There is no ceremony. And when they tire of each other they take other mates. It is a mark of friendship for a man to trade his wife to another. They trade mates for days, weeks, months, years and sometimes always. It seems to be mutually satisfactory. One man told me that he had a perfect wife except that she didn't like to be traded.

FAMILY LIFE IS TANGLED

"Of course family life becomes dreadfully involved. The children always go with the mother. Thus a man loses one family and acquires another overnight. But they love children—so much so, in fact, that the only unhappy couples in the arctic are those who have no children. It is possible, however, for a man to marry his daughter without knowing it.

"They are a superstitious race. They become the victims of their medicine men, or angekoks, as they call them. These men claim supernatural powers. They profess to tell the hunters why they have failed to kill seal and they obtain power over them. But the only two cases of murder I ever heard of in the sixteen years I spent in the Arctic had angekoks as the victims. One was harpooned and the other was shot. Each was attacked from behind. That is rather the Eskimo way. If he feels he has been wronged he may lay in wait and kill. Then the relatives of the dead man wait their opportunity to avenge the killing. The result is that they have feuds in the Arctic not unlike those in our Kentucky mountains.

"They are very superstitious about death occurring in the house. They will not live in any house that death has visited. And so the dying man is taken to some wooden shack and left there to die. They believe there are two other worlds—an upper and a lower—but they think of the upper world as Hell and the lower world as Heaven. The reason for that is that it is cold above and warmer underground, and to have warmth is to have a very great and rare reward.

"The largest village I knew in 1917 had no more than fifteen inhabitants. On this trip I found there were villages of fifty. They are herding together more, for protection against this evil spirit, and tuberculosis is claiming them now.

GOOD AND EVIL FROM WHITE MAN

"In many ways the white man has been detrimental to the Eskimo. He has brought coffee and tea and tobacco and the Eskimos have formed these habits, and when the white man goes they are unable to get the things they want. This has had a depressing effect. On the other hand, the white man has brought rifles and wood. To the Eskimo wood is more precious than gold, as the largest trees in the North are no more than two inches high.

"We found coal in Ellesmere Land, but the Eskimos had never used it. They did not know it would burn. When we showed them a coal fire one family went to the coal deposits, but they were asphyxiated by the fumes and some were killed. Now they will not touch it. Probably those coal deposits are too far north ever to be exploited.

"We picked seventy varieties of flowers in the Arctic. It may be a matter of interest to say that there are 770 different flowers in the Arctic Circle. They blossom on the very edge of the snow. We also grew radishes, lettuce and spinach under glass on the deck of the Bowdoin within twelve degrees of the Pole."

Dr. MacMillan said he hoped next year to fit out the Bowdoin again to explore the unknown coast of Labrador.
